Premier, Upheld In Commons, Set To Make 'Deal'

Von Ribbentrop, New Nazis Minister, Expected In London Soon; Chamberlain Prepares To Begin Friendship Talks With Italy As Opponents Rally For New Attacks.

BULLETIN

LONDON—(AP)—The British Labor party and Trades Union council issued a manifesto today demanding that the government submit its foreign policy to an immediate general election. "The government holds no mandate for the vital change it has made in foreign policy," the manifesto declared.

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—Political circles today forecast an early British approach to Germany along the lines of Prime Minister Chamberlain's "realistic" bid for the friendship of Italy's Premier Mussolini.

Joachim von Ribbentrop, Reichsfuehrer Hitler's new foreign minister and retiring ambassador to Britain, was reported in unofficial German circles to be coming to London shortly.

Ostensibly this would be to say his formal farewell to King George, but with Anthony Eden out of the way as foreign secretary it was believed he would have "useful exchanges of views" with British leaders.

Meanwhile the opposition in parliament marshalled forces for continued attacks on Chamberlain's new policy of seeking European appeasement outside the League of Nations, while the prime minister called the first meeting of the cabinet since Eden's resignation.

French Ambassador Charles Corbin called at the foreign office with what was believed to be assurance that Premier Camille Chautemps would continue in office at least for the present and was prepared to give Britain's new orientation full support.

Maps Italian Talks.

As Chamberlain prepared to start British-Italian friendship talks, organizations representing the opposition Labor party, trade unions and League of Nations peace associations arranged further demonstrations like that in the house of commons yesterday.

The opposition backed the idealism of Anthony Eden, who resigned the foreign secretaryship rather that pursue Italian friendship talks under circumstances which he held would indicate Britain was yielding to pressure from the Fascist Premier Mussolini.

Chamberlain, who held it his duty to seek peace with Mussolini and Germany's Hitler and avoid "the frightful question" of war, was reassured in his policy of practical dealings by a 330 to 168 vote of confidence from the house of commons.

The conservative party premier planned to confer tomorrow with Viscount Halifax, acting as temporary foreign secretary, and with the Earl of Perth, British ambassador to Rome who was called back to London for instructions on the Italian talks.

Lord Perth was expected to return to Rome and to open negotiations with the Italian foreign minister, County Geleazzo Ciano.

Eden's friends said he would explain fully his position on Friday before his Warwickshire constituents.

Calls It 'Sham.'

Premier Chamberlain, in parliament yesterday, rejected as a "sham" the league of nations idea of fighting aggression by force.

His statement "I still have faith the league may be reconstituted," raised the question whether a new conception of the league might emerge from the Italian-British agreement.

Chamberlain warned, "we must not try to delude ourselves, and still more we must not try to delude small, weak nations that they will be protected by the league against aggression. We know that nothing of the kind can be expected. The league is unable to provide collective security for anybody."

Ickes' Plea For Anglo-American Unity Seen Official U. S. View

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Secretary Ickes' call for Anglo-American unity against fascism and communism—avowedly made in the role of a private citizen—received immediate interpretation by Washington observers today as a general expression of official hopes.

These observers pointed out that Britons who heard a radio speech by Ickes yesterday necessarily would judge these words against a background of his position as a member of President Roosevelt's cabinet:

"The community of interest that exists between Britain and America, as well as between other peoples who believe in democracy, should be strengthened.

"Democracy can not live side by side in the same country with either Fascism or Communism. Totalitarianism, either of the right, or the left, is alien to the spirit that dominates the English-speaking democracies of the world."

Ickes, emphasizing that he spoke only as an individual, said the president alone is "charged with responsibility for foreign affairs."

His speech was carried by the British Broadcasting company to the greater part of the United Kingdom as the first of several programs by Americans.

President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull remained silent on European developments, but both were known to be studying them closely.

Senator Borah (R.-Ida.) said he believed England, by her gestures of friendship to Germany and Italy, had abandoned any hope that she could depend on America as an ally in war.

France Facing Menace As Grave As World War Days, Writer Says

(EDITOR'S NOTE: France considers herself faced with a menace as grave as that of 1918 when the German army was advancing on Paris, H. R. Knickerbocker, foreign correspondent of International News Service, states in the following review of the troubled international situation.)

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER
(INS Staff Correspondent)

PARIS—France is stripped to the loin-cloth—left without allies save that which is Red.

For the moment, this proud nation, which only a few years ago headed a system of alliances dominating Europe, feels bereft of every support except for far-away Red Russia and feeble Czechoslovakia.

Summoned before Anthony Eden fell as British foreign secretary and before the latest crisis became acute, the senate's committee of national defense is meeting in secret plenary session for the first time since the war today.

And it will now consider a situation which some describe as of equal menace as June, 1918, when the Germans drove with apparently irresistible force towards Paris.

Composed of the senate's commission of finance, army, air and marine, the national defense committee will receive a request for another $100,000,000 for the armed services, bringing the total of this year's expenditures for war to around $2,000,000,000—the largest in the peace-time history of France.

The offer of Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos to resign was based upon collapse of the French foreign policy. This was evidenced by

2 Homes Entered In Wave of Burglaries

THEFTS BOOST TOTAL TO 5 IN LAST 5 DAYS

FOOTPRINTS PROVIDE CLUE

Hears Burglar Leave As She Returns; Loot Minor In Other Home Breaking.

Police today were investigating the looting of two Mansfield residences in the past 24 hours—the fifth in a series of burglaries that have occurred in as many days.

Officers were called to 548 Wood street when Mrs. Harlan P. Weimer arrived home to find the front and rear doors of her home standing open.

Loot Valued at $110.

She told police that as she stepped to the front door she heard the kitchen door slam, which led her to believe that the thief was still in the house when she came home. Investigation disclosed that four of her husband's suits valued at $110 were missing from a bedroom closet.

Footprints at the rear of the house, police said, showed that a man had left by the rear door and started out through the backyard, but when confronted with a high fence, retraced his path around the house and ran south on Wood street. The prints revealed that the burglar wore a new pair of overshoes and that the brand label and size were clearly stamped in the soggy ground.

Breaks Glass in Door.

Entrance to the house was gained by breaking a pane of glass in the front door and reaching in to turn the knob, police said.

Police who were called to the home of Richard Witchey, 14 Newlan place, late yesterday afternoon reported that a thief had cut the screen in a rear door and carried off a half dozen eggs from an enclosed back porch. They said nothing else had been taken.

The burglary wave started last Thursday night when the Lindeman and Almy printery, 66 North Diamond street, was broken into, the combination knocked off a safe and the strong box looted of $11 in bills and an undetermined amount of sales tax money.

Less than 48 hours later, two other establishments, a filling station and a neighborhood store were looted.

Police Chief Meade K. Bates said he was of the opinion that the store and filling station were burglarized by the same persons but that an experienced "house man" had looted the Weimer home.

SENT TO TOLEDO

Hotel Assailant Found Insane At Court Hearing.

Adjudged insane by Judge C. H. Huston in common pleas court this morning, Luther M. Stall, 21, of Arcadia, Hancock county, accused of assaulting the wife of a North Diamond street hotel proprietor, was ordered committed to the state hospital at Toledo.

Stall escaped from the hospital several months ago, county authorities learned, but had been permitted to remain at his home on a trial visit. His return to the institution was requested by Supt. O. O. Fordyce of the hospital after hearing of the charge against Stall here.

Judge Huston's order provided that Stall cannot be released from the hospital without the consent of the Richland county court.

Stall is accused of attempting to choke the hotel proprietor's wife while she was showing him a room in the hotel.

Paralyzed Student Fights On, His Spirit Undimmed

Seminarian Who Has Lain In Cast at Hospital for 15 Weeks, Confident Medical Science Can Help Him.

By JANE WILLIAMS

The high courage which carried Michael Ondov, 25-year-old Wittenberg divinity school student, to victory on the college football field and through his dark days at General hospital since Nov. 5, still flies like a banner above a besieged fortress.

That courage is sorely pressed by the injury which has paralyzed his body from the hips down, and one suspects that he has dark, but he gives no sign of it as he discusses his injuries and the weeks that he has been confined in the Mansfield hospital, his world and his future confined to four white walls.

Victim of Speeding.

Young Ondov was brought to the hospital on Nov. 5, last year, after the car in which he was riding with several other students from Wittenberg college turned over a number of times on a curve near Hayesville. The driver was making 75 miles an hour when the unexpected curve came into sight, according to Ondov, despite the story of the group that they were traveling at a moderate rate of speed at the time. Immediately after the crash the boys agreed on that story to save the driver from paternal wrath.

As the car rolled over and over and Ondox was crushed between the front and back seats, a blinding fog of pain settled over him; but it was no more impenetrable than the fog which clouded his

FACE SEWAGE CONTROVERSY AGAIN TONIGHT

Councilmen To Give Debated Measures Second Reading At Special Session.

LITTLE ARGUMENT SEEN

Fireworks Not Due Until Next Week When 3 Bills Come Up For Passage.

The three controversial pieces of sewage disposal plant legislation which split council, 4-4, last week come up for second reading at a special meeting called by Mayor Claude M. Hunter for tonight.

The legislation—an ordinance, up for renewal, creating the sewage plant positions and setting salaries, another authorizing the employment of a technical supervisor and the third calling for a $1,500 fund transfer to pay the salary of a technical advisor, are to be given a second reading.

They were given their first reading a wek ago last Friday, after council had divided in a pre-meeting caucus on the sewage plant situation.

Opponents Stand Firm.

Little argument over the legislation is expected tonight, but a check today showed that two of the four councilmen who were opposed to the arrangement set up in the legislation had not changed their minds. The other two could not be reached, but it was learned of reliable authority that they were also standing firm.

Thus, while tonight's meeting will probably be brief and routine, with the sewage plant question the only one up for discussion, plenty fireworks can be expected at the third reading of the ordinance, when it will come up for passage probably next week.

The controversy dates back to the appointment by Mayor Hunter of J. R. Turner as sewage plant engineer, replacing J. P. Sotherland. The state health department had recommended employment of an experienced sewage plant engineer, setting up requirements which neither Sotherland, who held the job for nearly a year, nor Turner could fulfill.

Hinges On Technician.

However, the health board agreed to the appointment of an inexperienced man, if council provided technical supervision.

Mayor Hunter announced that he would ask council to re-appoint J. C. Collier, superintendent of the Elyria sewage plant to that post, at a salary of $125 per month. Collier was technical supervisor for six months while Sotherland was in charge of the plant.

It was on this point that council split, with three Republicans and one Democrat, Fred Miller, favoring the employment of an experienced engineer. The three Republicans were Councilmen Russell D. Porch, James Crum and George C. Kyle.

Miller said today he still favored employing a trained engineer, and Porch said he hadn't changed his mind. Crum was out of town, and was not expected to attend tonight's meeting. Kyle could not be reached today, but both were believed to have clung to their original stand. C. N. Shultz, the other Republican member of council, took little part in the argument that preceded the first reading of the ordinance.

The measures are expected to get their third reading at council's regular meeting on March 1.

SUPPORT PACT

Million Austrians Pledged to Back Schuschnigg.

VIENNA—(AP)—One million Austrian workers were reported today to have signed a resolution supporting Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg, who negotiated with Reichsfuehrer Hitler the Berchtesgaden pact of Feb. 12.

One interpretation of this action was that Socialist, Monarchist and Jewish sympathizers were pooling forces against the Nazis, whose influence was admitted to the government of the republic by the pact.

Labor and guild organizations in a number of cities issued manifestations demanding Austrian independence, incidentally upholding the chancellor.

Vienna was quiet after a night in which 15 Nazis were arrested for excessive jubilation — then quickly released and ejected from the Nazi organization.

"Col. Marietta and myself have just completed an examination of General Pershing," said the bulletin. "There is very definite improvement in his condition since the last bulletin issued last night.

"His lungs are perfectly normal. His blood pressure is definitely better. The condition of his heart is entirely satisfactory.

ENGINEER ON STAND; POLICE GET BRADLEY

Highway Employe Testifies State Paid Double For Surfacing Material.

ACE WITNESS GIVES UP

Surrenders To Police Chief On Perjury Warrant; Graft Hunters Subpoenaed.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS—Lee Bradley, star witness for the senate graft-hunting committee, surrendered today to Police Chief L. G. Corlett of East Cleveland on a perjury warrant.

Shortly before the committee ended its fight to retain custody of Bradley, who was accused of perjury by Gov. Martin L. Davey in connection with testimony linking alleged contributions of utilities and motor car corporations to the governor's 1934 campaign, it obtained from a state highway engineer the assertion that Ohio had been making "enormous overpayments" for road surfacing material.

Chief Takes Custody.

Bradley was turned over to Police Chief L. G. Corlett of East Cleveland shortly before 1 p. m., the time set for a common pleas court habeas court hearing on whether the committee could hold the Cleveland asphalt salesman longer.

The committee's action made the hearing unnecessary.

Bradley did not testify today, but Harry A. Sparks, bituminous engineer for the state highway department, told the committee:

"The road contracts were let by the state at approximately double the amount they should have been let."

Sparks said that the amount of "hot mix" bituminous road surfacing material sold to the state in the last two years amounted to between $8,000,000 and $9,000,000.

Asked by committee counsel James Metzenbaum how much the state had been overcharged, Sparks declared that he was unable to say definitely, but added:

"The state has been overpaying enormously for all its bituminous in the construction bureaus.'

Fixes $3.50 as Cost.

Sparks estimated the plant cost of "hot mix" at $3.50 a ton and said that a charge of $4.50 to $5 was unjustified.

Metzenbaum read into the rec-

Japan Recalls 3 Commanders After Chinese Successes.

SHANGHAI—(AP)—Recall of three of the highest Japanese commanders was announced today in the midst of reports that Japanese had suffered a sharp setback on the front north of Nanking.

Japanese army headquarters announced officially that Gen. Shunroku Hata, was stepping into the shoes of Gen. Iwane Matsui as commander-in-chief of Japanese forces in the Shanghai-Nanking area.

Matsui's recall because of the success of Chinese counterattacks, breaches of discipline in the Japanese army, and friction with other nations, became known unofficially last week.

The other two high officers ordered back to Tokyo were: Lieut. Gen. Prince Yashuhkio Asaka, commander of Japanese expeditionary forces, and Lieut. Gen. Heisuke Yanagawa, commander of the Hangchow Bay landing force.

Guns Blaze In Feud Over Land Rights, Missourian Near Death

INDEPENDENCE, Mo.—(U.P.)—The prolonged feud over rights to "Rumpus Island," a sand-bar formed 25 years ago by backwaters of the Missouri river, developed into a gun duel that left Frank Hurshman, 55, near death today with a bullet in his stomach.

Jesse Wirick, 33, told Prosecutor Russell W. Gabriel that he shot Hurshman in self defense. He said that each of them had a gun and was firing simultaneously.

Quarrels over the land have been waged for many years but Wirick said the fight was a personal one between him and Hurshman, and did not concern the dispute between Mormons of the reorganized church of the latter day saints, who claim "squatters rights."

Wirick said that he had leased 80 acres of the fertile sand bar for farming and grazing, with the stipulation that he build a fence. The fence cut off Hurshman's 30 cows and six horses from the succulent grasses.

"Hurshman came to my home, shoved a shotgun in my belly and threatened to kill me," Wirick said.

"I knew there would be trouble so I sent Mildred Sumner, a 14-year-old neighbor girl, to the Blue Valley schoolhouse to warn my youngsters to stay with a neighbor a while."

Wirick said he got his rifle to defend his house and that he fired in the air once to frighten Hurshman.

Then, he said, they both fired simultaneously and Hurshman fell wounded.

TEXAN HOLDS CRITICISM OF ARMS FEARED

Maverick Says Investment In More Bombers Would Make Nation Invulnerable.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—The administration was charged today with suppressing reports of tests showing surface warships vulnerability to airplane attack in an effort to protect the new battleship construction program against adverse criticism.

Rep. Maury Maverick, D., Tex., a new dealer who bolted President Roosevelt on national defense spending, made the charges. They were submitted by the United Press to the war and navy department and were denied in general terms by high ranking officers.

Maverick, a member of the house military affairs committee, said he had been told he could examine the test reports if he would keep the information confidential.

"The existence of reports on the vulnerability of an attacking fleet to airplane defense is not denied," Maverick said in an interview. "I have been told I could see the reports if I would keep them secret and that the war department has orders to keep them confidential.

Names Roosevelt.

"Obviously the secret is one that is being kept from the American people. President Roosevelt wants a big fleet of whopping battleships and anything that casts doubt on their usefulness is not for the public to know."

Maverick said air units demonstrated in Pacific maneuvers their ability to locate an approaching fleet and that it had been demonstrated that direct hits are not necessary to sink a man-of-war.

A 2,000-pound bomb dropped alongside, he explained, would disable a big cruiser by force of concussion. After vessels of the fleet were located in Pacific maneuvers, Maverick said the airmen "plastered them with sandbag bombs."

"The same amount of money sought for big battleships, invested in pursuit planes and gombers," Maverick continued. "Would make the United States invulnerable, if that is not true let it be proved untrue. Why keep the public in the dark, or, if we are to be saddled with a huge navy of supersuper ships, let it not be at the expense of neglecting our aerial defenses.

The story of a girl who tried not to be found, is the theme of "Lost Lady," the new serial which begins on Page 7 of today's News-Journal.

"Lost Lady" was written by George E. Holt, author of "The Rose of Soledad" which also ran in the News-Journal some time ago. Like that romantic yarn, it is laid in the west and southwest, much of the action taking place in Tijuana, Mexico.

A young prospector is charged by Tom Castle, an old timer in the mining district, to start a search for a long lost daughter, and the search turns to Tijuana, gayest city of the southwest.

With only a picture of the girl's mother to guide him in his search for a girl he has never seen, Murray Kilbourne starts out after old Tom Castle's death, but even after he is certain that he has found her, his task is complicated by the fact that she doesn't want to be found.

One of Murray's first acts in Tijuana is to slap the town's bad man and thereby make an implacable enemy. The bad man's determination to secure Castle's money through marriage to his daughter leads to exciting complications.

TOWN MENACED

Residents Prepare To Flee as Arkansas Levee Breaks.

FULTON, Ark.—(AP)—Raging waters of the Red river today threatened to force evacuation of this little southwest Arkansas town.

A few townspeople departed last night but most remained, hopeful that the giant protecting levee again would perform the task for which it was built more than 30 years ago.

The stream, at an all-time high of 35.7 feet, was several feet higher than the town itself, snuggling behind the dike, and lapped within a few inches of the top of the levee. The previous high stage, in 1927, was 35.6.

A levee break three miles east of here aggravated Fulton's situation. Water pouring through the break started backing up toward the town.

Terence Monahan, 23, and Ray Miller, 35, were arrested last night while attempting to hold up George Pilat, 31. They accosted Pilat as he entered his automobile and forced him to drive them about the city He shouted for help when halted at a stoplight and attracted two policemen who made the arrest. The attempted robbery occurred only a few blocks from the abandoned residence where Sammett's body was found Sunday

The development weakened an earlier theory that the murder may have resulted from a political motive, but police continued to study a half ton of records found in Sammet's room for evidence of anti-Nazi affiliations. He had told friends he left Germany because of an anti-Semitic campaign there.

Monahan and Miller carried .32 caliber pistols, similar to the one with which Sammett was killed. The guns were to be tested by ballistics experts.

Previous victims of robberies, police believe were committed by the suspects, said they were driven around in automobiles, taken to abandoned buildings and tied up.

Police theorized that Sammett also may have been a robbery victim and was killed when he resisted.

BACK AFTER 30 YEARS, TED LEWIS RECALLS HIS FIRST VISIT TO CITY

Ted Lewis, the only person in the world to wear the same hat longer than Queen Mary, leaned against the wall backstage at the Madison theater last night recalling the other time he played to a Mansfield audience.

That was before the days of the battered topper, and long before be was asking "Is Everybody Happy?" He was a kid from Circleville, O., who could play fairly well on the clarinet, and was still known by his own moniker of Theodore Friedman.

"I was 16 years old when I came to Mansfield, so it must have been along in 1907," he recalled "You had a little, dinky theater here called the Orpheum, with a funny shaped stage about the size of a hall in a five room bungalow. But man! that stage looked like Broadway to me in those days. I wish I could feel that important again—just once. I hadn't even finished high school but even then I was pretty well set on a stage career—the family to the contrary. And I was confident that I had everything for success—because I'd been assistant to the leader of the Circleville Boys' band, and had played several instruments in a music store down home."

That was the beginning of a career that has become a tradition of the American theater. Lewis is the "last minstrel," and back of him is a career that has endeared him to theatergoers throughout the nation, so that when his name goes up in lights over a marquee, whether it is in New York City or London or Walla Walla, there is a packed house.

That old silk hat of Lewis' is as much a part of him as his expressive, waving hands, and the legend of that topper isn't hokum built up for publicity purposes. It is the symbol of his success. Because of it and the impression of melancholy that comes from his soft, slow tones, he has gained the soubriquet of the "high hatted tragedian of jazz."

* * *

The hat was once the property of a cabbie whose stand was in front of Rector's in New York City, and sometimes when Lewis and the three other members of his band (then playing their first big time engagement at Rectors) rode with the cabbie; Lewis would take the colored man's high silk hat and wear it, twirling his cane and doffing the hat in mock grandeur.

One night he got into a game of dice with the cabbie, and won the hat. He wore it in his act that night and has never appeared without it since. That was in 1917, and in the 20 years since Lewis has spent more than $200 to keep the topper in repairs. On close inspection it is old and wrinkled and faded—but it is a symbol of an era in the American theater that still lives only because Ted Lewis is still a trouper.

And Lewis is a trouper of the old school. Last night he was feeling miserable because of a cold—but the audience out front never knew it.

The Lewis step was as light, his banter as gay and his songs as carefree and tuneful as if he had been in the pink. His shows, like himself, are of a type rapidly passing. There isn't an obscene joke nor a line of profanity in any act, not even a mild "damn." So far as he is concerned he still plays to the same type of audiences as he did before obscenity had a commercial value. He still holds fast to his belief that good showmanship, talent, beauty and personality is what the American public wants.

* * *

Perhaps he's right The minstrel who learned to lead a band on Main street of Circleville, seldom plays to poor houses. Yesterday he gave four performances in Mansfield to capacity audiences. Only once during the day could everyone in the theater be seated, and there were times when it was impossible to get through the packed lobby.

He moved on today to another one night engagement. In a few weeks he goes back to New York.

"Retire?" he repeated to a question. "Yes—when I die. It took me 30 years to repeat my Mansfield engagement—the chances are I'll be coming back again in the next 30 years!"

HOOSIERS STAGE BIG SHOW FOR 'FAVORITE SON'

Philippines Commissioner In Capital; Only Bands and Posters Are Missing.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Paul V. McNutt, high commissioner to the Philippines, said today of reports that he aspires to the 1940 Democratic presidential nomination "I am not a candidate for any public office."

(By International News Service)
(Picture on Page 5)

WASHINGTON—Nineteen forty's first full-blown presidential candidacy breezed into Washington today in the person of tall, tanned, handsome Paul V. McNutt, U. S. high commissioner to the Philippines, and one-time governor of Indiana.

The weather was rainy, but that did not prevent half a hundred newspaper photographers and reporters accompanying a like number of loyal Hoosier Democrats from forming a large reception committee to welcome the commissioner at the station. Several hundred leaders of Indiana democracy, who came here on a special train, constituted a larger reception committee at a hotel where McNutt "headquarters" were established in regular political convention style

Fill Up Hotels.

The national capital, which is used to various kinds of conventions and demonstrations, never saw anything quite like the show which the Hoosiers are putting on for the favorite son—two years in advance of the national nominating convention. They have taken 30-odd suites in one of the capital's most fashionable hotels, they have a press room for the accomodation of photographers and reporters and other appurtenances of a national convention.

Late this afternoon, from 4 until 7, there will be a gigantic reception for the candidate at the hotel. Some four thousand invitations have been sent out by Senator Sherman Minton, Indiana's junior senator. It promises to be quite a party.

Officially, the Philippine commissioner came to Washington to report to President Roosevelt on conditions in the far east, but the official character of his mission was almost completely lost in the political hurrah that accompanied him

All of congress and all of the more prominent officials of the New Deal have been invited to the reception this afternoon. But not all of them are going.

OPENS HEARING

Court Starts Muskingum Suit At Mt. Vernon Today.

MT. VERNON—(UP)—A three-judge court of appeals convened here today to hear arguments on the Muskingum conservancy district's appeal from an injunction against its issuance of $1,500,000 in 10-year general property tax bonds

Directors of the conservancy district proposed to float the issue to finance land acquisitions in the 17-county district and construction of dams and other flood control devices.

Although the injunction has prevented issuance of $1,500,000 in bonds an entire issue of $3,000,000 is directly involved.

The suit brought by Charles Hostetler, Canton, as a taxpayer, contests validity of the district directors' action in clarifying assessments against individual property owners

The Great Game of Politics

—By FRANK R. KENT

End of the Filibuster.

WITH THE sidetracking of the so-called anti-lynching bill, which, to the exclusion of all other business, has absorbed the attention of the senate since Jan. 3, ended—temporarily, at least—as extraordinary a piece of politics as the country has seen in many years.

Without in the least reflecting upon the sincerity of Senator Robert Wagner, whose name is attached to the bill, the fact remains that its White House support was given to enable the national Democratic organization to pay its debt to the colored voters in eleven northern and border-line states who helped them win the presidential election of 1936. No denial of that statement has been made. None could be. The facts are much too obvious.

AS A result of the Roosevelt policy of aid and jobs for the unemployed, of which colored voters in the northern cities have been the chief beneficiaries, coupled with an expensive, intensive and carefully calculated codling campaign in which Federal patronage and White House cultivation were used to an unprecedented extent, the great bulk of the big colored vote in these pivotal states was transferred from the Republican party, where it had been a basic asset, to the New Deal party, which it enabled to carry a considerable number of states, including Pennsylvania, Indiana, Ohio, Illinois and others. Without that transfer of the colored voters, each one of which counted two, there would have been no such "mandate" from the people as the New Dealers proclaimed and Maine and Vermont, instead of being an isolated pair of states, would have been just two in a most sizable group.

NO ONE really disputes that either. So clear was the administration's obligation that when last year the anti-lynching bill, which, in one form or another, has been introduced at every session of congress for a generation, was reintroduced with applied pressure from colored leaders all over the country, the administration, by which is meant Mr. Roosevelt, and the national party organization, by which is meant Mr. Farley, had to "come through," and they did. This bill, as Mark Sullivan wrote, was born in the conditions and spirit of many years ago, and was directed against what has come to be the rarest crime in the United States Yet, though Mr. Roosevelt carefully avoided any public advocacy of the bill, he used his full weight in its behalf.

HIS LEADER, Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, who no one believed wanted the bill, was compelled to fight like a tiger for it. At least he seemed to. While the filibuster was at its height and feeling high, Walter White, the colored lobbyist in charge of the bill, conferred with the president at the White House. The chief political force back of the bill in the senate was Senator Guffey, of Pennsylvania, who more successfully than any other Democrat has capitalized the colored vote in his state and who certainly would not have been elected in 1934 if it had not been for that vote, which amounts to considerably more than 300,000.

IT WAS HE who induced Mr. Roosevelt in 1934 to appoint a colored man as Special Attorney General, without the consent of the senate, and followed that up with a perfect deluge of federal favors for the colored race such as they never received from Republicans in their palmiest days. Upon the foundation laid by Mr. Guffey, Mr. Farley skillfully built, until the climax was reached in the 1936 campaign with a great division of the National Committee, and literally hundreds of teachers, preachers and professors, on regular salaries, traveling about the country with expenses paid, spreading the Roosevelt gospel. It was estimated that in the neighborhood of two million colored votes for Mr. Roosevelt, which had previously been Republican, were garnered. Naturally, the administration desire is to keep them and when the colored leaders made a point of the anti-lynching bill, administration leaders swung in behind it.

IT WAS determinedly opposed by southern senators for three reasons—first, because it was a clearly uncalled-for proposition, which would not diminish the crime at which it aimed; second, because it struck at the very roots of the State Rights doctrine, supposedly dear to the Democratic party and particularly dear to the south; third, because they knew that the passage of this bill inevitably would be followed by an effort to break down, through federal legislation the primary election laws in the southern states by which the colored vote is practically nullified.

THIS WAS ONE of those bills, like the court-packing bill the recently enacted crop-control bill, which would not have gotten ten votes in the senate on a secret ballot. Yet, if there had been an open roll call it would have gotten at least 60. It was the sort of bill that made hypocrites and cowards of a good many senators, and if there had been any real conviction behind it the filibuster would have failed. The test of sincerity came on the cloture votes, where the advocates of the bill could never muster a majority, much less the required two-thirds. Now the fight is over, the administration politicians profess satisfaction. Some of them say it is an ideal result. They point out that they have satisfied the colored leaders that they did all they could and yet have avoided the extreme resentment toward the administration which would have resulted had the bill been jammed down the throats of the southern senators. The latter, of course, rejoice, but the fight has increased southern hostility toward the Roosevelt regime and lessened the likelihood of Roosevelt-controlled states in the 1940 convention.

Hollywood Speaks—

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—"The Adventures of Tom Sawyer" should be sub-titled "A Star Is Born." No prophetic power is needed to forecast that Tommy Kelly, the Bronx schoolboy introduced to the screen in the title role, will be taken to the collective fan heart.

The new version of the American classic calls for no guesswork, either. It stands to make, and deservedly, a heap of money. The picture, directed in color by Norman Taurog, calls to new life the familiar characters and situations, and evokes a hearty and pleasant glow. Comedy, pathos and hair-raising adventure are blended, as in the original Mark Twain, to make a sure appeal to all ages.

* * *

Tommy Kelly's Tom may not be exactly the Tom Sawyer you've pictured, but he's a Sawyer to applaud none the less The boy's Irish face is so mobile and expressive that, likely due to Taurog's known facility with child actors, he seems to perform without trying.

Ann Gillis's Becky Thatcher is fine trouping, and May Robson does all you could ask with Aunt Polly. Victor Jory makes the dyed-in-the-wool villain, Injun Joe, almost credible and contributes notably to the terror of the cave scenes, here dramatized to the utmost for the climax. The hit-player who stands out is Olin Howland (the schoolmaster), whose dancing arm is a parlor trick in itself.

Walter Brennan, Jackie Moran as Huck Finn, and David Holt as Sid Sawyer (rather on the caricature side) are other principals

The cave scenes—you'd never guess it—were taken on the studio lot.

* * *

"The Baroness And The Butler" has a novel idea: A prime minister (Henry Stephenson) has a perfect butler (William Powell) who gets himself elected to parliament and continues in his master's service while opposing him openly in the government.

The prime minister's daughter (Annabella) injects the romantic problem, apparent from the start: How to bring the baroness and the butler to a clinch, class distinctions being what they are—or were.

Powell's performance, as usual, is polished and exact, and his beauteous co-star's scarcely less engaging. Stephenson, Helen Westly and Joseph Schildkraut in the other principal roles all are admirable. Studio-heralded as "gay, sophisticated, subtle romance," the picture is never raucous entertainment but should please the unhurried.

What Should Girl Do When Stood Up?

By VIRGINIA LEE

What is the proper technique if a person is "stood up"? In other words, if one has an engagement with a friend—male or female—and he doesn't show up and no explanation comes from him, what should one's attitude be?

JOAN doesn't wish her long letter published, or any part of it, but her problem is such a universal one that I think a good many people would be interested in a discussion of it.

Now of course when the persons involved are a young man and woman and the girl is much in love and is then left waiting at home when she has dressed herself all up for a Big Evening, it is a little different than if the two were of the same sex and there was no particular emotion about the matter. Although, I must say, there are few things more irritating to one's pride than to be disappointed when one has made an engagement with a friend One feels they are not properly appreciated.

Joan's case is the former. She was looking forward to a lovely time, had bought a new dress and made herself as pretty as possible, and then the man she has learned to dearly love did not appear. Worse, he never has let her know why he didn't keep the date. Probably some of you girls have suffered a similar disappointment and you know the feelings involved. You can't eat or sleep for wondering what happened and why you haven't heard.

Don't Get Angry.

In any case, no matter who is involved don't get angry first thing. Wait and expect the best. Queer things sometimes happen to keep people from keeping their appointments. You will hear in time, and then you can judge whether you will remain friends with said person or not Put aside your hurt pride, and decide on the basis of whether a person who is inconsiderate of his friends is worth cultivating, taking into consideration, too, of course, his other and desirable traits.

As to you, Joan, if this young man never shows up again and gives you a "perfect alibi," you'll have to make up your mind that he isn't the "perfect pal" as you thought, and make an earnest resolve to put him out of your life, no matter what your heart says On the face of the matter, what he did was an unforgivable thing, but there probably are extenuating circumstances. If he asks you again for a date, you can do as you like about accepting—but make it clear that if he isn't there on time you will have other plans for the evening.

* * *

HEARTACHES is in love with a man who has been married, but who has been separated from his wife for several years. She knows why they could not live together—at least she knows his side of the matter.

He is not divorced, and wants Heartaches to go with him to see his first wife and then he will ask her for a divorce and marry Heartaches. Heartaches is undecided what to do, although she loves the man and wants a home of her own

The fact that your friend has asked you to go with him to see his wife and ask for divorce, seems to imply that he is not afraid for you to hear the wife's side of the story, Heartaches. If you love the man, feel he would make you a good husband, why not take a chance? Any drastic step like that is a gamble, more or less. I don't quite see why you should go with him to visit his first wife, but whether you do or not, make up your mind to be happy.

A few drops of lemon juice added to the water in which glassware is rinsed will give luster to it.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

WHEN I opened the door of our suite I did not see the housekeeper in the corridor. But having had some experience with the little ways of hotel housekeepers, and the way they preserve their dignity—necessarily so for proper discipline of the maids under them—I looked along the hall and saw a half open door from which an instant later emerged a trim figure which came rapidly toward me She had been listening for the click of my lock, and had come out of hiding the instant she heard it. But I was equally certain that she would camouflage her absence from the corridor.

"Mrs. Pell?" I said inquiringly, scanning with approval her trim figure, short, compact, with a kindly, comely face, surmounted by modishly bobbed gray hair.

"Yes, and you are Mrs—Graham?" she answered, barely hesitating before the name, and I knew that she was depending upon the description relayed to her by the manager from the description given by Philip Veritzen or by Dicky

Would Make Changes.

"That is my name," I said, smiling.

"I do hope I haven't delayed you," she said solicitously. "Mr. Milner told me you would wish to see me in five minutes, and I thought I would put in the time inspecting a suite which was vacated two days ago, and which we have just had cleaned. We hotel housekeepers cannot leave anything to chance, you know"

"Can any housekeeper?" I countered. "But come into our suite I may not have a single question or requet for change, and, again, I may have a half dozen."

"Whatever you wish changed, just name it," she said. "I have very particular instructions from Mr. Milner to see that you are comfortable and pleased"

We entered the suite together, and when I had introduced her to Mary and to Miss Whitlock, she showed us the numerous advantages and comforts of the living room, two bedrooms, two baths and a tiny foyer which comprised the apartment.

"How bright and sunny this living room is!" I exclaimed, looking with undisguised approval at the charming room, with its extremely attractive rugs, draperies, furniture and pictures, evidently chosen by someone of impeccable taste.

Room Pleases Them.

"That is because of the big parking space below you on the next block," she said, leading us to the bay window, which had comfortably-cushioned, wide seats beneath it, and showing us the wide sweep of space made possible by the big parking field far below.

"It really isn't noisy at all," she said, forestalling an obvious objection.

"We wouldn't care if it were, would me, Auntie Madge, as long as we have this glorious light and air?' Mary said, and I knew that the love of freedom innate in her had prompted the query

"We are agreed upon that," I told her. Then Mrs. Pell showed us where the clothes closets were situated, told us the location of the waste chute in the hall, a necessity for me with my constant accumulation of paper, and finally stopped before a good reproduction of a colonial bookcase with desk and cupboard below, a companion piece, apparently, to the bookcase with desk and drawers below which I already had inspected and pronounced perfect as a temporary study.

Shows Novel Desk.

"I don't know whether you will want this," she said. "But if you don't, there are many guests who would like it There are only two in the hotel, one belonging to one of the company officers who lives here, and this one which is here because this is the best suite in the house."

She pulled down the lid of the desk, disclosing a space bare of pigeon holes or anything to spoil its spaciousness, but containing a brightly-gleaming electric grill with a cord ready for attaching to an outlet at the side Then she flung open the two lower doors and revealed to our fascinated gaze a small but entirely adequate electric refrigerator

"Oh!" Mary breathed ecstatically. "You take this away from me only over my dead body. We can 'housekeep' to our hearts' content with this."

Adviser Has Answers For Problems

By GLADYS GLAD

"America's Most Famous Beauty."

"I'VE BEEN having quite a bit of difficulty in applying my rouge so that it looks natural I know well enough that rouge should be placed to correspond with the natural coloring in the cheeks.

"But unfortunately, I don't have any natural coloring in my cheeks. What can I use as a guide in applying my rouge, so that I may be sure to place it correctly?

"CLAIRE."

If there is no natural coloring apparent in your cheeks, you may do one of two things to assist you in applying your rouge skillfully and artistically. If you pat your cheeks briskly—but not roughly, mind you—the blood will rush to the surface of the skin, and the cheeks will become flushed with color. You can then note where your rouge should be placed.

Again, if you bathe your face in hot water for a minute or two, and then quickly press on it a towel saturated with cold water, the color will rise in your cheeks, and will serve to guide you in applying your rouge so that you can make it appear as natural as nature's own handiwork.

"It certainly is true that fat makes a person look old and dowdy I was a perfect example of that very thing, not so long ago. But I recently followed your excellent reducing course and lost 35 pounds And now I look a good 10 years younger, without exaggeration.

"However, I've a new problem. I wish to give my face a weekly mask treatment, but my skin is very tender. Is there any special pack you would advise for a very sensitive skin? EVELYN"

An excellent mask for a sensitive skin can be prepared from barley flour and rose water. Stir into a half cup of barley flour enough rose water to form a smooth paste. Next, cleanse your skin thoroughly, and apply a bit of nourishing cream around your eyes and mouth.

Then spread the paste over your face and neck, and allow the mask to harden. When dry, remove it with a soft cloth and plenty of warm water. If your skin is dry, apply a bit of cold cream after the mask has been removed.

"I was under the impression that pumice stone was used only to remove callouses and stains from the hands and feet. However, my sister tells me that it can also be used to remove superfluous hair from the skin.

"Is this true? And is it an advisable method of removing superfluous hair? MARY."

Fine pumice stone is an easy and simple way to remove hair from the skin. It is especially suitable for removing superfluous hair from the legs. Of course, it does not remove the hair permanently. The pumice stone merely wears down and breaks off the hair at the point where they emerge from the follicles.

This method may be used as a temporary hair remover with perfect safety. However, I would not advise anyone to use the pumice stone to remove hair from the face. It might prove too harsh a treatment for the tender, sensitive skin of the face.

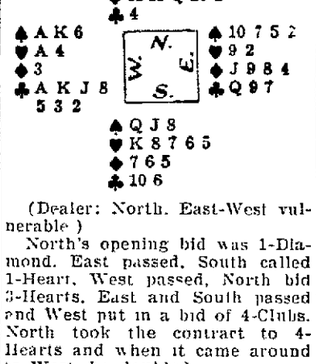
MATCH VS. RUBBERS

Methods of expert plays in duplicate tournaments for match points differ from their rubber bridge tactics somewhat in every department, even defensive play In any contest for total contract points, such as a team of four knockout game or rubbers, the defense must concentrate on defeating the contract in the safest and surest way, even if doing that foregoes any chance to beat it an extra trick or two. But in match point events, it pays to take a bit of extra risk for a bigger set, if the player thinks the odds are ever so slightly in favor of his getting away with it.



(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable)

North's opening bid was 1-Diamond. East passed, South called 1-Heart, West passed, North bid 3-Hearts, East and South passed and West put in a bid of 4-Clubs. North took the contract to 4-Hearts and when it came around to West, he doubled.

The deal arose in a duplicate and the final contract was 4-Hearts at all tables. At all except one, it was set one trick. But S. Carton Churchill of Great Neck Long Island, who sat in the West position, managed to set his opponents two tricks. He started his defense by laying down the spade K, and when his partner's deuce dropped, he switched to his singleton diamond. The declarer won the trick and led the heart Q, which West won. He then led a low club, hoping his partner held at least the Q of that suit. He did, and returned a diamond for Mr. Churchill to ruff with his last trump. The result was two down.

What is South's correct play to make 5-Spades, redoubled, the club K having been led?

This Beauty Secret Comes From a Doctor

Most women don't need beauty parlors. Your own doctor will tell you that sallow complexions and pimply skins are rarely matters for cosmetics. Because most skin blemishes are aggravated by constipation.

Dr. F. M. Edwards, during his years of practice, treated hundreds of women for constipation and frequently noted remarkable improvement in their appearance. He used a purely vegetable compound—Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. This laxative is gentle, yet peculiarly effective because it increases the bile flow without shocking the intestinal system. Musical at Ohio.

In "Everybody Sing," opening tomorrow at the Ohio, the important thing is the cast, for there is Fannie Brice bringing her famous "Baby Snooks" of the radio to the screen for the first time; there is Allan Jones who made a hit in "The Firefly"; Judy Garland, a youngster who sings like a veteran swingster; Reginald Owen, one of the most popular of character players; Billie Burke and Lynne Carver, an attractive newcomer in pictures. The story is too complicated and utterly mad to analyze it, but it is one of those "mad family" affairs in which everyone is something of a zaney. Miss Brice is the maid who wants to be an actress and Allan Jones is the family chef who sings at an Italian cafe as a side line. It is basically a musical comedy.

* * *

Synthetic Hurricane.

While it is never good sportsmanship to reveal the technical side of a picture, "Hurricane" is such a marvelous piece of realism that Goldwyn, the producer found people were as interested in how the hurricane was produced as in the finished picture itself. The entire island and village was built in the air and a half lagoon in the United Artists lot. On the shore of the lagoon nine huge Liberty motors, each capable of producing a 90-mile-an-hour gale, were mounted, and beside them a net work of big fire hose. The lagoon, when whipped by the wind motors, lashed out in fury, and the water from the fire hose became a driving, blinding rain. The artificial island was actually torn to debris in the wake of the synthetic hurricane. Dorothy Lamour, Jon Hall, Mary Astor, C. Aubrey Smith, and the other players worked for days in the face of this driving rain and wind. The picture is being shown for the second time this month in Mansfield, this time at the Madison.

* * *

Heartaches and Headaches.

Long love has its heartaches and the whole family has headaches when the newlyweds of the Jones family comes home from the honeymoon to "Love On A Budget." This episode of the Jones family brings Bonnie and her bridegroom out of the clouds of romance to the realities of steak and onions. The entire family of favorites—Jed Prouty, Spring Byington, Shirley Deane, Russell Gleason, and the others—are in the picture which is one of the attractions at the Majestic. Additional players this time are Alan Dinehart, Dixie Dunbar and Marvin Stephens. The second feature is the re-issue of "The Informer," with Victor McLaglen and Margot Grahame.

Darkest Before Dawn.

Things look dark for Bob Steele, hero of "Colorado Kid," which is current at the Ritz, just before the dawn, for in spite of his good intentions and loyalty to his boss, he is accused of the latter's murder, tried and convicted. Just before he is to be hung, however, he escapes in true western fashion, and sets out to find the real culprit. In the end he finds vindication and romance. The Western film supplements the stellar film, "Knight Without Armor," a romantic and dramatic adventure which brings together Marlene Dietrich as a beautiful Russian fugitive, and Errol Flynn as her mysterious knight errant.

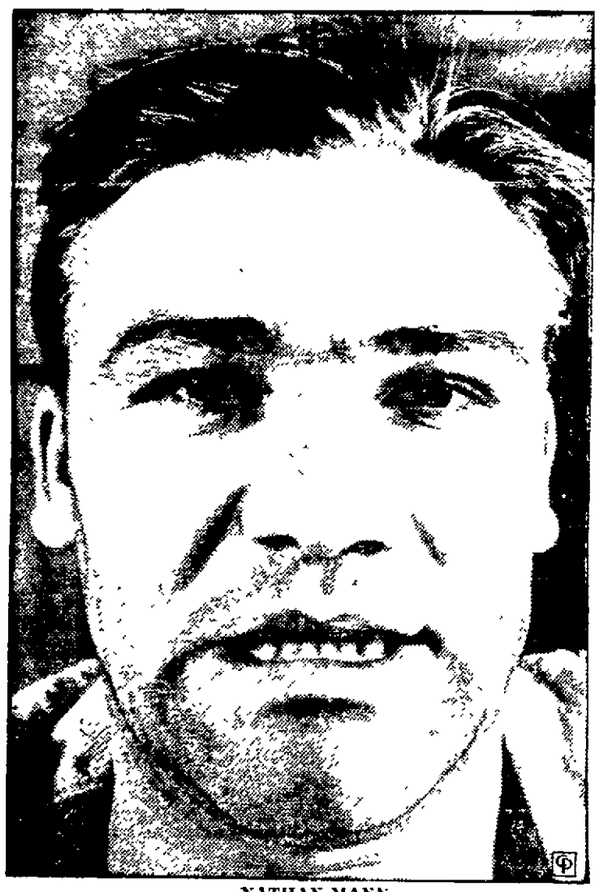
Evans Announces Sale of Players, But Fails to Discuss 1938 Plans

MEETS CHAMP TONIGHT



NATHAN MANN

Mann's Only Hope Is to Clip Louis Early; Advance Sale Indicates Big Gate.

By DAVIS J. WALSH, INS Sports Editor.

NEW YORK—Always an asset to be held dearly in the past, the world's heavyweight championship will be up for sale at bargain basement rates tonight as Joe Louis places his title out there on the counter in a 15-round fight with Nathan Mann, New Haven, Conn., challenger, at Madison quare Garden. Mann isn't a normal challenger. He's supposed to be the subject of a clinical experiment, whereby Louis sharpens his scalpel for the sterner business ahead with Max Schmeling in June.

Nonetheless, it's barely possible that the subject will climb off the operating table push the ether cone aside and cut the supposed surgeon in a vital spot. If he does the development will come as the greatest shock boxing has experienced in a generation, greater even than Jim Braddock's win over Baer and Schmeling's knockout of Louis in a non-title fight two years ago.

Nobody this morning is picking Mann to win. Few give him a chance. The odds are 5-1 against him and apparently his only hope is to go in there punching and clip this colored champion in the first few minutes of play. Otherwise the general expectancy is that Louis will win by a knockout before the end of ten rounds.

* * *

APPARENTLY, though, New York is not without its element of sadism for the advance sale indicates a gate of better than $100,000 tonight with more than a bare possibility that it will reach $170,000. It will be the first heavyweight championship to be decided indoors since Dempsey's sortie with the late Bill

COLUMBUS PROFESSIONAL TEAM THREATENS YUNCKER SPORTS' PERFECT RECORD TONIGHT

ABOUT the classiest basketball show presented in the city this winter is on schedule at Mansfield high school tonight.

Headlining the program will be a tussle between the undefeated Yuncker Sports, City Class A league leaders, and Athletic Supplies of Columbus, late of the National Professional Basketball league.

In the preliminary engagement at 7 p. m., the Westinghouse Electrics tangle with the Elks, City league contenders.

These two games promise plenty of action for the city's hoop enthusiasts, and the outcome of neither game is a certainty.

The Sports, who have hung up 11 straight victories, encounter their toughest opposition of the season in the Columbus quintet, which is headed by "Cookie" Cunningham, one of the greatest basketball players of all-time at Ohio State.

Cunningham, who has performed with such outstanding professional teams as the New York Celtics, Cleveland Rosenblums and Toledo Redmen, is an assistant coach at Ohio State at present, and handles the Supplies as a sideline.

The veteran pro star will be at center for the formidable Columbus aggregation, which held the Akron Goodyears to a respectable score the other night.

Jack Sullivan, who played a lot of basketball for recent Notre Dame teams, is also a member of the team. Clyde Anton, late of Ohio State, is another Supply cager.

Against this strong team, Manager Jimmy Brerer plans to use a lineup consisting of Al Stickler, Tom Farrell and Bob Fisher at the forwards, Tom Farrell at center and Jack Miner and Harold Hayfer at the guards.

Glenn Irey, Bob Bogantz, Harold Munster and Bob Charles are also expected to see service for the Sports tonight. Munster is a former Columbus East high star, while Fisher, who will appear in the starting lineup, and Irey are ex-Shelby high luminaries.

The fur is expected to fly in all directions in the preliminary game. The Westies and Elks are rivals of the first water and all of their games have been exciting affairs.

Rockne Heads Honor Roll Of Football 'Hall of Fame'

Pete Henry of Mansfield Listed Among Grid Greats By Gould.

By ALAN GOULD
Associated Press Sports Editor
(Third In A Series of Six Articles.)

OUR gridiron "Hall of Fame" is a composite of the best creative minds, the finest leadership, the best influences, and the greatest playing ability manifested over the last half-century. Obviously there must be a blend of these factors if we are to have a truly representative roll of honor in a sport covering so much activity, territory and variety.

As to relative value or stature of individual exploits, there always will be argument. As to the contributions of lasting renown by such figures as Knute Rockne, Lonnie Stagg, Walter Camp and Pop Warner, there can be no dispute. The very names are synonymous with the development of college football and are an inspiration to all.

Rockne was in his prime when he took off on his last flight. This descendent of the Vikings is our choice for the No. 1 role because as player and coach, as moulder of men and thought, he left the biggest impression of any one individual in the game's history.

Camp rightfully won the sobriquet of "Father of American Football." He was not only a good coach and fine organizer but a great administrator.

Stagg, like Camp, was a star player at Yale but won renown chiefly as a coach.

Rivaling Stagg as an influential figure, from viewpoints of coaching and leadership in the Midwest, is Michigan's famous Fielding (Hurry-up) Yost.

Warner brought to the coaching profession a rare spirit of resource and invention.

Warner's name is indelibly linked with the individual prowess of the man generally considered the greatest of all players, Jim Thorpe.

If our "Hall of Fame" backfield, comprising Thorpe, Walter Eckersall of Chicago, Red Grange of Illinois, and Dutch Clark of Colorado, isn't the all-time quartet, it will do until further evidence is posted.

From the gallant host of "Old Blues" we believe Hinkey, four-time all-American end, and Helfelfinger, an all-time guard, most entitled to the "Hall of Fame" accolade.

For all the glamour of those early days it is doubtful whether any attack boasted more potent spearheads than Stanford's Nevers or the great Bronko Nagurski of Minnesota and the Chicago Bears Heffelfinger no doubt was superb in his prime but so, in later days, were linemen like Truxton Hare of Pennsylvania, Germany Schultz of Michigan, Belf West of Colgate, Wilbur Henry of Washington and Jefferson, a Mansfield, O., boy, and Turk Edwards of Washington State.

KNUTE ROCKNE

To "Big Three" adherents, such names as Ted Coy of Yale, Ned Mahan of Harvard and Phil King of Princeton belong in any "Hall of Fame," but no more so, on all essential counts, than those of Chuck Barrett of Cornell, Wally Steffen of Chicago, Willie Heston of Michigan, Chick Harley of Ohio State, Bo McMillin of Centre or George Gipp of Notre Dame. The honor roll of the gridiron is long and luminous.

MILLER, GLOVER MEET TOUGH FOES ON FRIENDLY HOUSE CARD MONDAY

CURLEY" MILLER, flashy Mansfield lightweight tackles Ernie McKinley hard-punching star of Ashland in one of the feature bouts on the amateur card at the Friendly House Monday night.

Young Miller, a protege of Jimmy Miller, appeared on numerous amateur cards in Mansfield in the last two years and has never been defeated. His appearance on the Friendly House show promises to be one of the highlights of the program.

In McKinley, the Mansfielder faces one of his toughest tests of his short career. The Ashland youth has also been prominent on Mansfield amateur cards and had turned in brilliant performances on every occasion.

Mike Wentz and Johnny Vilella, matchmakers, said today that had added another attraction that is expected to meet with the approval of Mansfield adherents. The bout will pit Beauford Glover, 131 ebony flash of the Friendly House, against Al Kelley, 131, of Willard.

Glover can be expected to "turn on the heat" in his effort to protect his great record. In the past three years the youth has won two Friendly House championships and the title on last year's Y. M. C. A. amateur card. Not much is known about his opponent but Wentz said today that the Willard lad would provide Glover with a busy evening.

Ten other three-round bouts are being booked for the card. And a free-for-all will be present as the opening attraction.

Tickets for the opening amateur card in Mansfield this year will be on sale at the Gladhand, Hunt's News Depot, Corner Lunch, Frank's night club and Rex Billiards. All seats will be 35 cents. Only a limited number of ducats are available and Wentz urges boxing fans to secure their tickets early.

Foreign News Spurs Stock Market

SHARE PRICES UP FRACTIONS TO TWO POINTS

Pre-Holiday Lethargy Yields To Faster Pace as Optimism Reigns.

NEW YORK—(AP)—Wall Street took an optimistic view of new-term European peace prospects today and stock market leaders were pushed ahead vigorously for gains of fractions to as much as two points.

The pre-holiday lethargy appeared to have yielded to a faster pace, with blocks of 1,000 shares showing frequently. Near the second hour profit taking had cut extreme gains a trifle.

Foreign markets, which advanced yesterday, again were higher with American stocks in favor. Bonds, secondary rails in the lead, moved upward. The major commodities improved, wheat, cotton, rubber and copper futures contracts were in demand.

Over-the-holiday news gave some encouragement to board room analysts.

Preliminary reports indicated retail sales in rural areas so far this month have held above the January level and less than three per cent under that of the 1937 comparable. Executives of some of the automotive concerns disclosed February sales well ahead of January.

"Iron Age" expressed the disappointment of the trade that clarification of the steel price structure, long awaited by buyers, had failed to aid new business to any broad extent.

FIVE MORE ILL

Smallpox Total Reaches 87; 4 Quarantines Lifted.

A further increase was reported in the number of smallpox cases in the county today by health authorities as Dr. Roy C. Rehder, city-county public health commissioner reported five new cases in the past two days. Four families have been released from quarantine in the same period.

The new cases, three of which are in the city bring the total reported in the county in the past 19 days to 87. The victims are Harold Geiger, 29, 140 Blymyer street; Elmer Miller, 24, 18 North Adams street, Benton Kaylor, 7, 63 Ford street, a student at Hedges school; James Hazelett, 17, Madison township and Robert Miller, 18, Washington township, both students at Madison township high school.

Meanwhile Dr. Rehder reported that Wayne E. Miller, principal at Madison township high school, who has been confined to his home for the past 17 days had been released from quarantine. Others released were Earl Stutz, 193 Wayn street; Joseph Radojcsics, 47 Auburn street, and James Love, 316 Newman street. Miller was one of the first to contract the disease.

PARALYZED, HE WON'T GIVE UP

Seminarian Who Has Lain In Cast 15 Weeks, Confident Science Can Help Him.

With a broken back and other severe injuries, he was brought to General hospital and for days his life hung by a slender thread. Fraternity brothers and fellow students came to Mansfield and gave blood for transfusions, and slowly, week by week, he took a firmer grasp on life. But from that moment the car rolled over to this day, Ondov has not known that he had legs or feet, except when the nurse shows them to him. For 15 weeks he has lain in one position in a heavy cast.

Daily massages and all that medical skill can do have failed to bring life back to that part of his body.

Discouraged? A little. But his faith in his future is as sure and strong as it was when he ended four years of college at Wittenberg and entered the seminary there.

"There will be a way, I feel sure," he told a News-Journal representative who called on him. "The doctors and hospital attendants here have been splendid, and my faith in them has done a lot to keep up my morale during the trying weeks, but I have a hunch that if I could get to one of the hospitals and specialists who work entirely with spinal injuries, I would have a pretty good chance.

Parents Mortgage Home.

"More than a chance. I know. I'd be all right again—because all of the years I've studied and worked, all the sacrifices my parents have made for me here, can't have been done for nothing." It was the only hint he gave that desperation sometimes clutches at the citadel of his courage.

And sacrifices they have made for him. From the days when he attended Concordia Military school, through four years of college and one in the seminary, his parents have made sacrifices to help him with his education. And after his accident they mortgaged their modest little home in Lakeside to provide the best of care and medical attention for him. Now that fund is gone.

If Michael Ondov is to have his "chance" at one of the greater hospitals in America, it must come through benefactor or benefactors. He admits that. But he is confident that it will come.

"If I knew for an absolute certainty that I would be well and strong again, and could go on with my career, I could pledge my future as security for the money," he said. And that was the only indication the gave that there is any doubt at all in his mind as to the happy outcome of his tragedy.

Ondov won his letters in football and basketball at Concordia and was captain of the rifle team at Wittenberg. He is president of his fraternity, Pi Kappa Alpha, national organization. He is also a lieutenant in the R. O. T. C.

His ability to make friends has made for his small hospital room something between a library and a club room. He is surrounded by books and magazines; the Lutheran ministers of the city spend hours with him, playing chess and bridge; nurses and doctors stop at his room for daily greetings. During Christmas week he received 500 greeting cards. His parents and sister come to Mansfield every week-end to see him.

If there is doubt and despair in Michael Ondov's heart, it is not reflected in his bright, intelligent eyes, his firm chin, nor warm handclasp. To all outward appearance his courage has a firm grasp on the ball and is hitting straight for the goal line.

Senator Fights $5,000 Pension for Harrison's Widow.

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Senator Walsh (D-Mass.) protested today as "entirely unwarranted" a proposed $5,000 annual government pension for the widow of President Harrison. The proposed pension for Mrs. Mary Lord Harrison of New York, Walsh said, "presents an unanswerable argument for pensions to all widows."

CHAMBERLAIN UPHELD, PLANS ITALIAN 'DEAL'

He denied hotly former Prime Minister David Lloyd George's accusation of withholding an Italian telegram until Eden resigned last Sunday.

Avowing he had done nothing "disgraceful," Chamberlain said he merely had learned of the telegram's import from a friend of the Italian ambassador, Count Dino Grandi. He told the cabinet of its purport, acceptance of the British formula for removing foreign volunteers from Spain, but said he did not get the telegram itself until Monday.

Eden declared he had no "official intimation" of the Italian government's capitulation on this point until after he resigned, but that it would have made no difference in his decision to quit. Eden had demanded witl awal of the volunteers as a preliminary point before beginning any Italian frienship conversations.

From the continent came these reactions:

1—Nazis in Berlin were confident an English-German accord would follow settlement of British and Italian differences, and that, by the time Premier Mussolini plays host to Der Fuehrer Hitler in Rome next May, Germany would regain war lost colonies and the 3,500,000 Germans of Czechoslovakia would be free to pursue Nazi activities if they chose.

2—In Paris, French Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos hinted that France might enter into negotiations for an understanding with Italy, rather than adopt an isolationist policy. Delbos, addressing the chamber of deputies foreign affairs committee, named two conditions: the League of Nations must recognize Italian sovereignty in Ethiopia before France took such action; Italy must retire her volunteer troops from Spain.

3—In Praha, the Czechoslovakian government announced parliamentary debate on foreign affairs would be postponed until March 1—after Chancellor Schuschnigg of Austria makes his parliamentary address on Thursday and tells his side of the story of the Berchtesgaden agreement with Hitler, whereby Nazi inclined ministers entered the Austrian cabinet.

Russia Calls for 'Invincible Navy.'

MOSCOW—(INS)—Soviet Russia must have a "mighty and invincible navy," Defense Commissar Klement E. Voroshilov declared today as the U. S. S. R. took stock of Nazi advances in Austria and the forthcoming Anglo-Italian peace talks.

In an order of the day addressed to the naval commissariat, Voroshilov urged rapid construction of a Soviet navy capable of standing up to any opposition.

He said the nation expected those responsible "to build for it the best ships in the world and to train for its sailors those wholly devoted to the cause of Communism."

In an order of the day to the army, issued through the defense commisariat, Voroshilov said the Soviets are in constant danger of armed attack by surrounding capitalist countries.

He pointed out the Red army is splendidly equipped technically and urged blind submission by the soldiers to become "worthy defenders of the great fatherland."

Roosevelt Silent on Foreign Crisis.

HYDE PARK, N. Y.—(AP)—President Roosevelt, still silent on the European situation after a conference with his new ambassador to Great Britain will return to Washington tonight.

Ending a five-day stay at his boyhood home, he planned to board a special train late in the afternoon for a daylight trip down the Hudson.

While no engagements have been made for him at the White House, he may see Secretary Hull tomorrow to go over the latest European diplomatic happenings upon which he declined to comment at a press conference yesterday afternoon.

Joseph P. Kennedy, who sails today to take over his new ambassadorial assignment at London, received his final instructions at a luncheon conference at the Roosevelt home just before the press interview. He stood beside the chief executive as reporters pressed question after question about events abroad, only to receive a "no comment" reply.

the following events:

First, Belgium has deserted and today comes a report that King Leopold intends visiting Rome.

Second, Poland has deserted and today there is another report that Foreign Minister Joseph Beck is going to Rome.

Third, Rumania has deserted, with the pro-German King Carol all powerful.

Fourth, Yugoslavia has deserted, with Premier Milan Stoyadinovitch fraternizing with the Nazis.

Finally—Britain.

The eyes of most Frenchmen are now turned from France towards her enemies, the two dictatorships.

Twenty-three speakers have notified of their intention to speak in the foreign affairs debate scheduled for the chamber of deputies on Friday when the fate of the government will be decided.

Behind the arguments of each will be the realization that the proposed Anglo-Italian talks, if successful, are bound to lead to a proposal that France enter a four-power pact, abandon her agreement with Soviet Russia and concur in virtual abolition of the League of Nations.

Furthermore, chances appear weighted in favor of success of the Anglo-Italian talks, because Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain has now publicly risked his whole political position upon their success.

As seen here, the crisis resolves itself into this formula: The price of continuing peace in Europe is indefinite but not unlimited. At the time Italy and Germany are demanding of Britain and France the following:

Hitler asks a free hand in Austria and Czechoslovakia and isolation of the Soviet Union.

Mussolini asks domination of the Mediterranean, specifying that if she ceases to support Generalissimo Francisco Franco in Spain, Italy must obtain a joint share in guarding the Suez canal.

Both dictators wish exclusion of the League of Nations from any influence on events if nots its complete abolition. Failing to obtain satisfaction, the dictators threaten a military alliance to gain their ends by force.

Chamberlain has chosen to meet this threat by conciliation and the French government, faced with the alternative of isolation with the Soviet Union, now indicates it may follow Britain's lead.

Meaning that for the first time since the war a so-called victorious republic feels compelled to recognize German and Italian hegemony in Europe.

Aunt Jemima To Be Hostess At Pancake 'Party'

A free meal isn't to be sneezed at any time, but when it is hot buckwheat cakes and maple syrup, with hot coffee for a chaser, and served by that rotund and widely advertised cook, Aunt Jemimathat's sumpin.

Aunt Jemima herself "in person" will be the wide-smiling hostess all day Saturday at Buehler's Market. She will serve her own brand of buckwheat pancakes, Log Cabin maple syrup and Maxwell House coffee, baking her griddle cakes throughout the day.

The personal appearance tour of Aunt Jemima is being sponsored by the Quaker Oats company, which brought her to Cleveland for the Pure Food show. She has appeared in all of the larger cities of the country, and a few of the smaller ones. The picture of Aunt Jemima appears on every package of her flour and on billboards throughout the country, and her name is one of the most familiar trademarks in America.

HEAR REPORTS TOMORROW OF COUNTY ROADS

Township and County Officials To Be Told Conditions Worst In Years.

When Richland county road officials and township trustees meet tomorrow in annual session at the First M. E. church, they will hear a pessimistic report of the condition of the county's roads.

County Engineer Howard C. Sword, who as chairman of the meeting will give the opening talk, will tell trustees and county officials that the roads are in the worst condition in years and that the county has no money for rebuilding them.

Unusual weather conditions this winter have virtually destroyed a number of the secondary roads and the road base is still so soft that county employes have been unable to do anything toward a repair program except to fill the deepest ruts with stone, Sword said.

One Bright Spot.

The only bright spot in the picture, he said, was a streak of luck which enabled the county to purchase about 10,000 tons of rock ballast from the Erie railroad at an average price of seven cents per ton.

The ballast, made up of small stones, gravel and slag, is being used to fill the deep trenches cut in the gravel and stone roads by heavy vehicles. The same amount of stone purchased from quarries and shipped into the county would cost approximately $12,000, Sword explained, while the ballast will cost about $700, not including transportation in county trucks.

Tomorrow's road session will open at 10 a. m. and will continue through the afternoon. The program will include talks by Sword, C. L. Mitchell, chairman of the county commissioners; J. R. Thomas, president of the state trustees' and clerk's association; Ralph C. Lutz, state representative; County Auditor Norman L. Wolfe, and County Prosecutor Glenn W. Marriott.

Motion pictures of secondary road maintenance methods will be shown.

Officers for 1938 will be elected by the township trustees and clerks organization in the county.

BOUNTY ON RABBITS

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo.—(U.P.)—Lincoln county pays a bounty of 2½ cents for each rabbit killed by its residents. The rabbits have done considerable damage to farms in the county. A pair of rabbit ears furnishes the proof needed to collect the bounty.

Fannie Back On Screen Again

"Everbody Sing" brings back to Mansfield the film star who had the longest "run" of any in the history of the city. Fannie Brice (left) in "My Man" was the picture at the Madison theater when the building burned in January of 1928, and her name remained on the marquee for many months. Miss Brice, Allan Jones and Judy Garland are starred in "Everybody Sing" which opens Thursday at the Ohio theater.

HOST AT PARTY

Masonic Lodge Fetes Members and Families Tomorrow.

Mansfield Lodge No. 35, F. & A. M., will hold a family party at 8 p. m. Thursday at the Masonic temple for lodge members and their families. The event is limited to children over 12 years of age. At Christmas time the lodge held a party for children under 12.

A variety program of entertainment has been planned for the evening. Included on the program will be the Accordioneites from Smart's Studio; the Three Grace Notes, Dorothy Clingan, Ruth Cox, and Jane Weuthrich, accompanied by Genevieve Howl; Glenn Schroff, tap dancer, and Mildred Wappner, acrobatic dancer. John Grabler will act as master of ceremonies.

Following the program lunch will be served. Dancing will be held for the remainder of the evening with Nels Blocker and his orchetra furnishing the music.

The general committee in charge of arrangements is made up of Robert Campbell, chairman, Dr. F. O. Eckstein, and Dan R. Wolf.

EXTENDS HOURS

Garbage Department to Stay Open Saturday Afternoon.

Offices of the municipal water, garbage and sewer department in the city building will remain open until 4 p. m. Saturday to receive payment of garbage collection bills, Fred A. Lingafelter, secretary of the department, announced today.

The department usually closes at noon Saturdays but because of the holiday yesterday due to Washington's birthday, it was decided to remain open all day Saturday, Lingafelter said.

Names of garbage department customers who fail to pay their bills by Tuesday when the new quarter starts, will be removed from the service lists. About 60 per cent of bills due have been paid to date.

INCOME TAX IN NUTSHELL

NO. 27

Deduction for Traveling Expenses.

To obtain a deduction for traveling expenses, which form an important item in the returns of many taxpayers, certain regulations must be observed. The taxpayer is required to attach to his return a statement showing the nature of business in which engaged, the number of days away from home during the taxable year on account of business, total amount of expense incidental to meals and lodging, and total amount of "other expenses" incident to travel and claimed as a deduction. Among the "other expenses" are tips, provided they are reasonable in amount.

Traveling expenses are deductible only when the trip is on business. They are limited to such expenses as are reasonable and necessary in the conduct of the business and directly attributable to it.

Traveling expenses incured in connection with a journey to another city to accept or seek employment are not deductible. Suburbanites who commute daily from their homes to their places of business are not permitted to deduct the cost of transportation, it being a personal expense.

Claims for deduction for traveling expenses must be substantiated, when required by the Commissioner of Inernal Revenue, showing in detail the amount and nature of the expenses incurred.

NAMES ERIE RAIL TRUSTEES

Federal Court Picks President, Attorney as Re-Organizers.

CLEVELAND — (AP) — Federal Judge Samuel H. West has named Charles E. Denney, Erie president and John A. Hadden, Cleveland attorney, as trustees of the railroad under section 77 of the Federal Bankruptcy Act.

Judge West made the Hadden appointment subject to further consideration, however.

Denney, the road's top executive since 1929, saw Erie go under federal court control Jan. 18 when it reported it expected to be unable to meet $10,000,000 debts between Jan. 1 and March 1.

He was a railroad engineer before he became Nickle Plate's vice president and general manager in 1921, and Erie's vice president in 1927.

CLAIMS UNDER SECURITY ACT RISE SHARPLY

200 In District File for Lump Sum Payments; Average Now Reaches $31.

Claims filed for lump sum payments under the old age insurance plan of the Social Security act have increased sharply in the Mansfield district, R. G. Mish, manager of the district office said today.

Approximately 200 claims have been filed in this area to date, with 42 of this number submitted in January alone, Mish reported. Lump sum payments averaged $31.68 last month, almost double the average of $17 for all claims paid up to the end of August, 1937.

Nationally, claims were certified during January for a total of $745,691 for payments to 23,538 claimants, workers who had reached the age of 65 and to the estates of workers who had died, Mish said.

$525 Largest Claim.

The largest claim certified so far, $525, went to an employe who reached the age of 65. The largest death claim certified was for $420.

Since the government's old age insurance plan went into effect, more than $2,000,000 has been certified for payment to 76,775 claimants. Each of the claims amounts to 3½ per cent of the total wages paid wage earners from Jan. 1, 1937, the date the act went into effect, until they reached the age of 65 or died.

In Ohio, 2,060 claims were certified during January, for a total of $65,286. The average of $31.69 is one per cent higher than that for the nation, Mish pointed out. To date, 6,064 claims have been certified in Ohio, the payments totaling $166,151.

The Mansfield district under the security act includes Richland, Morrow, Ashland, Marion, Crawford and Wyandot counties.

Brides Urged to Change Names on Security Records

Brides of the past year who obtained social security account cards before their marriage were requested to file their new names with the Social Security board to prevent confusion in the keeping of their wage accounts for federal old age insurance.

R. G. Mish, manager of the Mansfield field office of the Social Security board, said that a card for this purpose, designated as "employes request for change in records" is available at his office in the Richland Trust building.

Mish explained that since wage accounts are kept in the name the workers gives his employes, individuals who change their legal names should correct the records to insure accurate recording of their wages.

"Wage information reports filed by employers and transmitted to the Social Security board indicate that many employes have gone to work on new jobs under their new names without notifying the board of the change," Mish added. "This complicates the keeping of their accounts and might make it difficult to ascertain the full amount of the benefits to which they will ultimately be entitled."

Senate-House Split Threatened on New Relief Bill

MEASURE HITS SNAG, FINAL VOTE DELAYED

Upper House's Demand For Rapid Spending Expected To Meet Opposition.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—A senate-house disagreement over the $250,000,000 emergency relief bill was in prospect today because of the senate's demand that the money be spent as rapidly as necessary.

The senate adopted that provision, 38 to 36, after Senator Schwellenbach (D-Wash) pointed out yesterday that under present law the emergency appropriation would have to last until June 30.

Sec House Protest.

Several senators forecast the house would not agree to the change, inasmuch as that chamber originated the requirement that funds be spread over the fiscal year.

Adoption of Schwellenbach's proposal was the signal for other senators to seek changes in the bill and the prolonged debate upset plans of administration leaders for a final vote last night.

Senator Minton (D-Ind) proposed an amendment permitting works progress administration employes to hold public office, a practice now banned.

Senator Austin (R-Vt) suggested local communities be authorized to meet their share of relief costs by furnishing materials instead of cash.

From Senator Bailey (D-NC) came an admission that he had little hope of a favorable vote on his proposal to require local communities to contribute 25 per cent of the cost of relief projects. Bailey said:

"The American people have developed a strange conception that they can come up here and get the federal government to build any sort of project they want."

He protested against expenditure of relief funds for "country clubs, golf courses and ski courses."

The senate sent to the White House yesterday a bill approving a two-year extension of the Frazier-Lemke moratorium act.

The house was considering minor legislation until the tax revision and naval expansion bills are ready.

COURT DELAYS ASSAULT CASE

Hearing Continued So Defendant Can Summon Witnesses.

Granted a continuance of his case in municipal court this morning, Emery Conn, 20, of Shelby, will be arraigned Thursday morning on a charge of assault and battery. The continuance was allowed by Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch to permit the summoning of witnesses for Conn.

The youth was arrested by Shelby police at his home yesterday following an altercation at Ontario Monday night. In a warrant signed by Orla Rush of Ontario, Conn is accused of striking Rushs 17-year-old son.

Deputy Sheriff Glenn Humphrey brought Conn to the county jail where he is held pending a hearing.

A Farmer's Diary

Feb. 23.

OUR nearest neighbor and his wife live on the other side of the road, in a little cottage of just two rooms, half hidden by evergreen plantings. The ceilings are low, the outside walls covered by gray-green composition shingles, with white painted sashes and cornices—the inside ceiled and painted also.

Here the elderly couple sit during the long winter evenings, listening to the radio, and planning for their summer garden. Their flowers are always the talk of the community.

This little cottage has a history. Twenty years ago a bachelor of 60 built a narrow little house, and bolted it onto the running gears of a farm wagon. He bought the lot across the road and got his neighbor to haul him out, wagon, house and all, intact. He placed it under the pleasant shade of a large shagbark hickory, on the hilltop.

The first winter our friend lived in this house on wheels, with the bare improvement of four steps which led up to the door. The next summer he planted a good sized vineyard, of many varieties—also a number of fruit trees. In the fall he removed the wheels and placed the house on a level with the earth, making it warmer. The following autumn, after vines, fruit trees and garden were cared for well, he built a room on the southern end. He roofed it carefully and bricked a chimney where the two rooms joined.

When all was just as he desired it, he lived there, happily, just one short year. The grass grows green upon the little mound at the foot of the hill, and others now enjoy the fruits of his labor.

STILL A PUZZLE

More Data Needed on Jobs for Middle-Aged, Says Miss Perkins.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Secretary Perkins suggested today that labor, industry and government needed more figures before they could successfully attack the problem of how to find more jobs for workers over 45.

"None of the studies made so far appears to get at the cause of the problem," Miss Perkins said, in an address prepared for a committee she appointed to consider a solution.

ATTENDANCE UP BUT TARDINESS INCREASES TOO

January Report of Schools Shows 225 More Tardy Than In December.

Pupils in Mansfield public schools were more regular in their attendance in January than in the preceding month, but they had more trouble getting to school on time, attendance reports to Supt. W. L. Miller showed today.

The per cent of attendance for the city's 13 schools was 92.3 as compared with 93.1 in December, while 3,305 pupils were absent or tardy last month as against 3,073 in December. An increase in the number of cases of tardiness represented most of the difference.

With an attendance of 96 per cent, the Western avenue school topped others in the city. The Brinkerhoff and Bushnell schools were tied for second place with 95.8 per cent each, the report shows.

604 Tardy in 2 Schools.

Senior high school and John Simpson Junior high, with the largest enrollments in the city, reported 604 of the 1,112 cases of tardiness last month.

There were 44 cases of truancy, 24 of them in John Simpson Junior high. Eight schools, Bowman, Brinkerhoff, Bushnell, Hedges elementary, Prospect, Western, West Fifth and Woodland, had no truants during the month.

Total enrollment for the month was 6,430, an increase of seven over December. The average daily attendance was 5,983 as against 5,901 for December.

John Simpson school had 1,316 pupils enrolled, the most in the city, and 27 more than Senior high school, in second place.

WINS PRAISE IN BANDIT CAPTURE

Messenger, 22, Follows Gunmen, Lead to Their Arrest.

NEW YORK—(AP)—A 22-year-old telegraph messenger who pursued two fleeing bandit suspects on his bicycle despite threats of death was credited today with their capture.

Robert Bottcher saw three men enter an automobile at a Brooklyn stoplight and slug and rob the driver, John Gallagher, 37.

Bottcher followed the car until the men abandoned it, and then pursued two of them as they fled together on foot.

The messenger continued to follow them until he sighted two patrolmen, who captured the suspects, one of whom carried a revolver.

MENACE 50 IN NIGHT CLUB RAID

Gunmen Kill Operator, Flee With $100 Loot.

HOLLYWOOD—(UP)—Two robbers caused a panic during a night club floor show early today by whipping out guns, cowing 50 patrons and shooting the proprietor to death because he reached for the money too slowly.

Harold A. Thompson, 38, was shot through the heart as he stood behind the bar of his night club.

The young bandits posed as patrons. As a singer ended the show, the pair showed their revolvers. One threatened the crowd. The other ordered Thompson to open the cash register and when the night club owner did not move fast enough, he fired at him point blank. They escaped with $100.

STANDING PAT

CINCINNATI — (INS) — The Anna Marie Hahn club, a group composed of members of the jury that convicted Mrs. Hahn of the poison murder of Jacob Wagner, believed today, nearly 3 months after returning the verdict, that the woman should die in the electric chair March 10. This was revealed at a luncheon of the jurywomen in a hotel here. The one male member of the jury was not able to attend.

SMASH 'RING'

Federal Agents Seize Heroin Valued at $50,000.

NEW YORK — (INS) — Three weeks of patient detective work led today to the smashing of an east side narcotic ring and arrest of three men. Detectives seized 312 ounces of heroin, said to have a retail value of $50,000, and arrested David Altman, 35, Philip Seltzer, 25, and Joseph Ryan,

Hold Dress Rehearsal Tonight For 'Night of January 16' To Be Given at School.

GALION — With dress rehearsal set for tonight, announcement was made today of those in charge of the stage and other activities for the presentation of "Night of January 16th" to be given by the Drama Workshop Players Thursday night at Senior high school auditorium.

The stage crew includes Sam Manning, John Cowl and Kenneth Flick; light effects are in charge of Cowl; and make-up will be handled by Ruth Reece. Posters have been made and designed by Arthur Lindley.

The entire cast for the play includes some 20 characters. There are, however, 12 members of the cast who will be chosen on the night of the performance. These will represent the jury, and are to be selected from the audience.

Besides a number of players who have appeared in Drama Workshop productions before, there are a number of others who are assisting. In order to make the trial setting more realistic and in keeping with the rules and regulations of a regular court room, a Galion attorney, George Coble, has offered suggestions and will also play the part of the judge in the production.

Other guest players include Carl Baehr, George Nickels, W. F. Von Brock and T. R. Dougherty. Members of the club who are making initial appearances are Mrs. Clarence Myers, Ruth Miller, Howard Thayer, and Virgil Myers. The remainder of the cast which includes several principal characters, have appeared in several previous presentations.

Added to the list of ushers who will serve Thursday night is Marybelle Swick.

Executions of Former High Officials Bared In Speech.

MOSCOW—(AP)—The secret execution of two former commanders of the Soviet navy was disclosed today in published versions of a speech by Commissar of War Klementi E. Voroshiloff.

The two were Admiral Vladimar R. Orloff, who was ousted as commander-in-chief of the Russian navy last year, and Admiral A. K. Sivkoff, who had been replaced as admiral of the Baltic fleet.

Voroshiloff, speaking last night on the eve of the Red army's 20th anniversary, named Orloff and Sivkoff in a group with the executed Marshal Mikhair Nikolaevitch Tukhachevsky and a half dozen others as "Fascist bandits, traitors and spies" who have been "wiped off the face of the earth."

SELF-STYLED GRAND NIECE OF ZAHAROFF FIGHTS FOR RICHES

(By International News Service)

BOSTON—Half of half a billion dollars, the fabulous fortune built by the munitions trafficker, Sir Basil Zaharoff — is the stake claimed by Miss Olga K. Zaharoff, 19, Boston University freshman and self-claimed grand-niece of the famous mystery man of Europe.

Unfolding a romantic story of the life of the man of whom it is said his monument is the gravestones of a million men, Miss Zaharoff charged that a will of her Grand-uncle, leaving her and her sister to share his $500,000,000 estate has disappeared.

Her father's brother, Basil Zaharoff, is now fighting in the French courts for her interests, Miss Zaharoff said.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Kuzma Zaharoff, fled Russia before the Bolshevik revolution, she said. They now live at Claremont, N. H. Sir Basil was also a Russian of aristocratic birth. His mother was a Greek.

Sir Basil was an officer in the Russian army. Miss Zaharoff claimed, and obtained the foundation for the tremendous fortune he amassed, when he found a cache of bribes given Russian officers by Japanese during the Russo-Japanese war. Sir Basil, she insisted, never took a bribe himself. He was loyal to the czar.

Married very young, Sir Basil lost his wife a few years later, Miss Zaharoff said, and a baby girl, their only child, also died. It was a severe blow to her grand-uncle, she said.

Eight years ago, the Boston University freshman said, he told her that he would give her the fabulous Monte Carlo casino.

EUROPE AWAITS TRUE PICTURE OF NEW STATUS

Eden's Resignation Reveals Passing of Idealism, Says Writer In Summary.

By DEWITT MacKENZIE
(Associated Press Foreign Affairs Writer)

NEW YORK — There is no earthly way of arriving now at a correct summation of the tangled elements of the Fascist-Democratic conflict that finally have found public expression in the British cabinet crisis and plunged three-quarters of the continent into a fresh fit of nerves.

Still, there are things which stand out from the facts that underlie the rather theatrical resignation of England's youthful and idealistic foreign minister, Anthony Eden—the political Sir Galahad of Europe who wouldn't barter his conscience to Dictators Hitler and Mussolini. Among the things which one can see clearly, though not evaluate as yet, are these:

Item—Idealism is a drug on the market and no longer a good buy.

Item—Anthony Eden achieved great distinction at home and abroad because of his high ideals. However, it may be true that by an uncompromising and at times professorial attitude he laid himself open to the charge of being unsuited to all negotiations of a controversial nature.

Chamberlain Keen.

Item—The British program of compromising with the dictators in the interest of general peace comes from one of the world's keenest minds—that of Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain.

He plans, for example, to make an about face and recognize Mussolini's conquest of Ethiopia. Those of the "practical" school say: 'Whether you like it or not, Mussolini has annexed Ethiopia."

Chamberlain says his program will ensure peace for a generation: Eden says it is sacrificing principle and piling up anguish from the dictators in future

Item:—There is every indication that in revising her foreign policy England has discarded any thought of helping protect the independence of the little nations of central and eastern Europe

Item:—The Anglo-French affiliation, which has been taking the side of democracy against the fascist bloc, has been weakened for practical purposes, though it is impossible to say how much

France feels herself abandoned to the Berlin-Rome axis, despite Chamberlain's assurance of continued friendship France wants more than friendship—she wants practical support

Item:—Chamberlain not only is about to negotiate with Italy but conemplates an amicable adjustment of Germany's demand for colonies. The dictators will have to pay for what they get from Chamberlain

Item:—There is this to be said in favor of Chamberlain's policy: The splitting up of four major powers into two blocs—Germany and Italy versus France and England.

ENGINEER SAYS STATE OVERPAID FOR 'HOT MIX'

Paid Double Price, Witness Declares; Bradley Gives Up To Perjury Warrant.

ord a circular signed by C. W. Simpson, executive secretary of the Hot-Mixed Bituminous Paving Industry of Ohio, Inc., which asked all "hot mix" manufacturers to make up records justifying a plant cost of $4.75 to $5 a ton.

The information was needed, Metzenbaum quoted the circular, "so that the figures may be used by highway and highway department officials to prove that their estimates are in line."

The committee turned Bradley over to Chief Corlett upon motion of Sen. Verner E. Metcalf, who said that the investigators would not have sufficient time to go into other phases of his testimony because it would take "four or five days."

Committee members also agreed to release to Governor Davey an incomplete transcript of testimony given by Bradley, self-styled "political contact" man for the governor.

"Copies of the transcript will be delivered to both sides (Davey's and Bradley's counsel) simultaneously in order to be impartial," the committee announced after the governor's attorney, Charles S. Druggan, asked the Franklin county common pleas court to compel the release of a copy.

Cleveland Testimony Out.

Committee members said the transcript would include only testimony given in Columbus and not that given last week in Cleveland. Bradley, whose statements linked alleged contributions from utilities and motor car corporations to Davey's 1934 campaign, has repeated in Columbus most of the testimony he gave in Cleveland.

Druggan, who brought suit against Hazard Okey, a member of the court reporting firm employed by the committee, announced that he would press for a court order, however, to obtain full copies immediately. The committee gave no indication when it would authorize the release of any transcipts.

Subpoenas were out, calling upon six members of the seven-man committee, their counsel and two court reporters to appear Thursday morning in East Cleveland for the arraignment of Bradley on a perjury charge.

The legislature is scheduled to adjourn next Monday and the attorney general has ruled that the committee has no authority to function after adjournment.

The committee created a stir when it placed into the record what Senator Metcalf termed a "vicious" letter written by Bradley to Davey on June 15, 1934.

The committee declined to release the text of the letter for publication after Bradley, upon advice of his attorney, asked the investigators to withhold it.

Criticized Bradley.

The letter was written in Kansas City after Bradley had been censured, he said, by Davey and R. E. Burger, vice president of the Henry L. Doherty Co., in New York, for sending Burger a telegram which they considered indiscreet.

Bradley said the telegram related to business he had arranged for the Davey Tree Expert Co., of Kent, O., with subsidiaries of the Doherty company.

To support Davey in his campaign for governor, Bradley testified, he paved the way for the utilities to make contributions or to give a large amount of tree-trimming business ot the Davey company.

Bradley said Davey telephoned him he was about to lose considerable tree-trimming business because of Bradley's telegram. He said it required 30 days "to straighten the situation out."

In the letter of June 15, 1934, Bradley displayed impatience over waiting for Burger to act on a proposal and wrote: "The time to act is now. They can't hold this up until Aug. 14 (date of the primary election). If you are defeated, we will be left high and dry. . . . The time to bring this to an issue is right now when we have them in a corner."

Bradley told the committee that Wendell Willkie, president of the commonwealth & Southern Corp., in compliance with an agreement made with Davey and himself in New York, gave him the names of heads of subsidiaries and authorized him to use Willkie's name in calling upon them.

Then, Bradley said in a purported letter to Davey, Willkie became frightened and "called off his men from giving us business."

He said he proceeded to prepare "for any flareup" Willkie "might try," he added that he "got evidence and like Cities Service, I had him nailed to the cross."

Discussing his contacts with Cities Service, Bradley said he was to get a cent a gallon on gasoline sold by the company to the state.

Triumphal cross-country "parade" of Paul V McNutt, high commissioner of the Philippines and former governor of Indiana, to Washington for talks with President Roosevelt and a reception by Indiana Democrats strikes a snag—because of Mc Nutts' plane ride from San Francisco to Denver. Col. Davenport Johnson of the San Francisco army base who flew McNutt to Denver, without authorization of the war department, was relieved of his charge and relegated to a secondary post at Rantoul, Ill While war department officials denied the transfer was anything but routine, others indicated it was one way the administration could crack down on the New Deal "problem child." McNutt is being boomed by some factions for the presidency in 1940.

ICE BLAMED AS TRUCK DERAILS TRAIN, INJURES 30 PASSENEGRS

WORTH, Ill. — (U.P.) — An icy pavement was blamed by police today for a grade crossing crash of a paper company truck and a fast St. Louis-Chicago passenger train of the Wabash railroad in which one man was killed and 30 persons injured.

All of the cars making up the train — three pullmans a coach, diner and baggage car—were hurled from the tracks, tore up 30 feet of roadbed and toppled over at an angle of 45 degrees before they came to a halt.

Approximately 100 passengers on the train were shaken up by the impact.

Frank Gregson, 40, Chicago, driver of the truck, was killed. The injured included seven members of an orchestra, en route from an engagement at St Louis university to resume work at a Chicago hotel.

Maxine Gray, 23, Shreveport, La., vocalist, who suffered head and back injuries, and Bruce Milligan 26, Boston, Mass., trombonist with internal injuries, were removed to a Chicago hospital. The others suffered only slight injuries and were able to join uninjured members of the band for its scheduled performance last night.

Train officials said most of the injured were given minor emergency treatment and then dismissed from hospitals. About 15 remained, they said.

The crossing is protected by flasher signals Witnesses told police Gregson apparently had applied the brades at the last moment, but the machine skidded and stalled

CHECK TRAFFIC ON 5 CROSSINGS IN CITY TONIGHT

Mayor Orders Survey During Hours When Tracks Are Not Protected.

The first steps toward compliance with the city's request for the installation of full-time protection at all part-time guarded grade crossings were to be taken today as traffic checks at five crossings were arranged

The survey, which will cover only the periods the various crossings are not guarded, was ordered today by Mayor Claude M. Hunter, following a request from W E Harrington, of the state utilities commission for figures on the amount of traffic on crossings during the unguarded hours.

In a communication to the mayor Harrington wrote that he would be in Mansfield Feb 28 to complete the survey and asked that the survey be taken before that time.

Use Street Employes.

Hunter said that a count will be made of all autos, trucks, buses and pedestrians crossing the unprotected tracks during the hours when a watchman is not on duty He said street department employes would probably make the check

Surveys will be made at the double track crossing of the Erie railroad at North Main street, unprotected from 11:30 p m until 5:30 a m., a single track crossing of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad on North Main street unprotected from 7 p m. until 7 a m; a double track of the Erie railroad on North Diamond street, unprotected from 5 30 p m until 5 30 a m; both the Erie and B & O crossings on North Mulberry street, unguarded from 11 30 p m until 5:30 a m., and the Pennsylvania crossing on East Fifth street, unprotected from 10 30 p. m. until 5 30 a m.

The word "obey" is being quite generally dropped from marriage ceremonies—probably because of non-enforcement.

Some persons who have looked over the "simplified" income tax blank still think that falling off of a log would be much easier.

The national house of representatives shows the same old technique on the farm bill, legislating in haste and letting the senate correct its work at leisure.

No One-Way World Trade.

THE close hook-up of world trade and world peace was referred to by C. Douglas Booth in his talk on "World Economic Co-operation" at Senior high school Monday evening in one of the sessions of the Institute of International Understanding now being held in Mansfield.

Along this line, it is interesting to note that hearings on a proposed reciprocal trade agreement between the United States and Great Britain are to start in Washington about the middle of March—at which time will arise the old, old controversy involving protective tariff, tariff for revenue only, and free trade.

Opposing forces on these subjects are vast and complicated. The battle has been raging for several generations. For a long time the issues of tariff and free trade constituted the greatest difference between Republicans and Democrats in national elections.

Protection of American "infant industry" by high tariffs on imported goods was once the rallying cry of Republicans, but, now that the infants have grown up, there has been increasing support of the idea that world trade is greatly to be desired and that this is being hampered by tariff walls erected by the United States—and by other countries in retaliation.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull favors low tariffs, and in this position he has the support of a reciprocal trade agreement and the backing of President Roosevelt. Sixteen reciprocal agreements have already been made and it is now planned to make one with England.

This country and England together transact about one-fourth of all the world's business. It is contended that a trade agreement between these two countries to increase that huge volume of business will have a marked effect on world trade and world peace.

Every tariff student appears to have a pet theory. The whole matter is so confusing that a clear understanding seems impossible.

One thing that can be understood, however, is that the United States cannot maintain and enlarge an export market for its surplus agricultural and industrial products unless it permits imports in exchange.

National 'Understanding' Also Needed.

WHILE efforts are being made to bring about better understanding and friendliness among the people of different nations it might not be amiss to also strive toward greater amity among residents of various states in this presumably united country.

Most recent incident revealing the animus that has carried through more than seventy years since the end of the war between the states attaches to a proposal to erect an equestrian statue of General Robert E. Lee in Arlington National cemetery at Washington.

Long before now the enmities caused by the conscientious differences of opinion which resulted in the Civil war might well have ceased to exist and the heroes of the nation should suffer no further disparagement because of their beliefs.

This will be a stronger, better, more prosperous nation when the Civil war becomes more generally recognized as an unhappy means of establishing "a more perfect union," rather than as a permanent alignment of one part of the country against another part.

Shall Spelling Be Taught?

NOW there seems to be a chance to get somewhere! Two members of the Mansfield board of education are quoted as having expressed themselves favorably to the idea of teaching spelling in the high school. Superintendent W. L. Miller has also, at one time and another, indicated a kindly attitude toward such a suggestion.

Just when the teaching of spelling was eliminated from the Mansfield public school system is not entirely clear—in fact the process was apparently so gradual that it was accomplished without public detection . . . except in instances where jobs acquired by graduates required some elementary familiarity with correct spelling.

In the main, however, it has been necessary for young people to learn spelling after graduation, rather than while in school.

Such perfunctory attention as has been given to teaching spelling in Mansfield public schools in recent years has been confined to the lower grades. It has been assumed that high school students "knew how to spell."

Whatever "frills" may be justified as a part of the public school educational system, these cannot safely be permitted to serve as substitutes for essentials—anymore than a second floor can be put on a building without having a foundation and first floor.

Members Arlin and Mead are to be complimented on their perspicacity in recognizing the deplorable inadequacy of orthographic education in Mansfield public schools.

Highway Freight Cars.

THE FEDERAL government is said to have "suffered a reverse" in the Supreme Court decision upholding state rights to regulate road traffic. A state, said the court, may limit the width and weight of trucks passing through its territory.

The case involved a South Carolina law limiting truck width of 90 inches and gross weight to 20,000 pounds. Most citizens today would probably agree with the court that this is not unreasonable, although various states now allow bigger trucks and loads. A vehicle load of more than ten tons may break pavements not strongly built, and a width of more than seven and a half feet may make driving dangerous on narrow roads or curves, by obstructing the view ahead.

"IT'S STRONG MEDICINE, BUT YOU'LL HAVE TO TAKE IT"

White House Press Conferences Explained

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON—Far be it from me to favor a censorship of White House news.

However, by no means am I convinced that a return to the old written-question-and-answer system of conducting White House interviews would amount to a return to a censorship.

It was not exactly a censorship before. Neither is the present system altogether the reverse of a censorship.

* * *

OF LONG STANDING

It might be apropos to enter into a few details concerning these presidential press conferences.

I do not know just how far back they date, but I do know that the White House had them as long ago as the time of Presidents Roosevelt 1st and William Howard Taft. I myself attended a few during the regimes of Presidents Wilson and Harding, and a great many of Presidents Coolidge, Hoover and Franklin D. Roosevelt.

It always has been the rule that the president must not be quoted, word for word, except in certain especially permitted cases. Presidential utterances were "put up" to a "White House spokesman." Or, otherwise, somehow, the quotation was indirect.

* * *

TWO A WEEK

Traditionally there are two of these conferences a week.

Journalistic queries used to be submitted in writing, in advance.

When they were answered, a little additional questioning might be permitted, in amplification of presidential rejoinders, but, in the main, the conversation was restricted to prescribed lines. Interrogations which the chief executive chose to disregard simply were ignored.

* * *

HARDLY CENSORSHIP

In a fashion this was a censorship, perhaps.

Still, when a newspaperman gets an interview, I always have contended that the interviewee is entitled to see his interview and "okeh" it before its appearance in print. It is a nuisance and a delay, but I think it is the interviewee's right.

Now, this can not be done at a press conference with the president. At least 100 interviewers are present at such a conference. It is not practicable for the interviewee to endorse so many interviews.

* * *

IT'S A CHAT NOW

The written-and-answered system no longer prevails.

The presidential interview is a more or less informal chat.

The president is asked unexpected questions, and answers, necessarily, on the spur of the moment.

A query may irritate him. He may tell the querist to "put on a dunce cap and go stand in a corner." That has occurred. I have known a newspaperman to be expelled from the National Press club because of his account of the president's behavior when a disagreeable question was put to him. I should call that QUITE a censorship.

* * *

AS STEWART SEES IT

The White House Correspondent's association is a compact little body.

It depends on White House good will to "get away" with its monopoly.

It is an airtight censorship.

It necessarily is pro-presidential or it is not admitted to the presidential executive offices.

You are pro-presidential or you are excluded.

Maybe, if you are too emphatically anti-presidential, you are excluded from journalistic association altogether—if executive authority is potent enough.

Tribute to a Great People.

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

RECENTLY, an internationally famous and popular artist took vicious advantage of his high position . . . microscopically lettered in the corner of a magazine illustration which would be seen by thousands, a scurrilous attack on the Hebrew people.

This outrageous incident might be ignored were it not so widely reflected in the attitudes of many otherwise sane and fair people. But, because of that attitude, it becomes more than a personal insult...which may only be offset, if at all, by an honest and heart-deep tribute to a great people, given voluntarily, out of personal gratitude.

As one American, this is my tribute.

It is not enough for me to say, "I respect and admire Jews," nor enough to say, "I like Jews," nor enough even to fling that conventional and, to me, contemptible phrase, "Some of my best friends are Jews." Out of my own experience, out of my own debt, I can only cry—

THANK GOD FOR JEWS!

That debt—it goes so far back. Back to a poor girl in the rough, unlovely American frontier of the 80's. A poor girl hungry for beauty. So first they came to me—Jews bearing that beauty. Rare, cherished pages of the finest words, the bravest thoughts I had ever read. Rare, cherished snatches of unearthly music...Jewish words, Jewish music lifting me, and millions like me, above the sweat of horseflesh, the jingle of spurs, the stink of city alleys.... And, as the years went on, other Jews, crashing old barriers of ignorance and superstition, opening new scientific horizons.

Great thoughts, triumphant experiments, lovely sounds. But they gave more, far more than these, in those early years....gave, above all, the glory of God, Himself. Tall as mountains they rinsed my young reverence round. King David—old—his garments stiff with jewels—his wrung face stained with tears—baring his shamed and broken heart to heal all human agony with his immortal Psalms. Terrible as storms, the Prophets — thundering Isaiah - wailing Hosea.

And, most beautiful of all in His eternal youth, that brave and gentle Lad who, broken on the cross, yet left us all we have of hope and gallantry.

JESUS OF NAZARETH...KING OF THE JEWS!

Jews. Jews bringing beauty and wisdom, courage and song. One Jew, giving His life upon a cross ...and others, giving theirs in laboratories, freezing attic rooms and bloody pogroms. Serving so gladly if only Truth might somehow be revealed.

Then, closer, more personal memories—such as we all have known—of those we so condescendingly rate as "some of our best friends!" A young Jew giving hope and healing to my suffering son when there could be no hope of payment or publicity. A valiant Jewess, sitting serenely in a crowded court, braving the wrath of feminine hysteria...her own life's work in jeopardy because she would not twist plain facts to suit their Nordic rage.

And one last memory—unforgettable. A Labor Day in New York City. Evening — the massed and weary poor returning from the beach. Feet...feet...that endless, thudding tide of limping Jewish feet. Yet, round each shuffling pair, a pattering circle of still smaller feet. And, deep beneath the city's crash and hoot, a sound as sweet and solemn as a chant—

The laughing cluck and murmur of contented love—

Of Jewish love and laughter turning toward its New World home—

Of Jewish dreams that serve a New World hope.

Poor, liming feet! Proud, laughing love! Feet that break trails... and dreams that build a world.

Just Jews?

THANK GOD FOR JEWS!

Falling Commodity Prices Bring Cure-Alls.

—By LESLIE EICHEL

THE next congress may be full of newcomers with panaceas. The present depression will not end prior to the primaries. The fellows with the free-and-easy gab and cure-alls will stand a good chance of nomination and election.

This ought to cause shivers to run down the backs of business and labor. Perhaps it does.

I have covered primary contests for a long time now. I never have heard of so many previously as are scheduled for this year. Many heads will roll in the sand among old-timers.

From the present outlook, the New Dealers have the advantage over standpatters. But both may be mowed down by the quack cure peddlers.

* * *

DEMOCRATS POPULAR

The Democratic nominations still are the popular ones. The chief contests are in the Democratic party.

The Republicans have a few, enough to cause schisms.

Thus neither side is happy. In fact, these are very unhappy times, politically.

Pennsylvania, incidentally, is the unhappiest hunting ground of all. No fewer than five persons seek the Democratic gubernatorial nomination there. Two seek the Republican nomination.

* * *

THE KEY

The key to all the political commotion is the decline in commodity prices—in spite of stimulating efforts.

That gives the soothsayers their opportunity to make magic promises.

And it gives many sleepless nights to others. Read this in the Wall Street Journal:

"What Great Britain and the United States really are concerned about is not that one or the other may take independent steps affecting the value of its currency, but that commodity prices may continue to decline. There is a mutual interest in this situation and presumably that should help to perpetuate a close working agreement in the foreign exchange market. Neither country is in a position to remain complacent while any prolonged decline in commodity prices get under way, but at the same time it is not pleasant to contemplate a series of devaluations by both countries in order to cushion the effects of commodity price weakness. It has been noted that commodity prices have shown little inclination to rally. The British and Dutch interests are particularly disappointed that rubber, after severe restrictions in export quotas, has failed to improve."

* * *

NEEDS REST

President Roosevelt needs the fishing trip to Florida which he quietly arranged. From all reports, he is very tired. The entire nation troops to his doors, and lay its burden there.

The head of each modern nation finds the same difficulty. There are no lieutenants who can carry the load.

And why not?

Because we have heroized a few men. It is a fantastic age: We insist upon one outstanding political leader, one outstanding ball player, one favorite movie star . . .

We have ceased to train or heed the quiet worker, the quiet thinker; we cast aside, perhaps, the true talent, the ones who will not clothe themselves with glamor—and leaders have no successors. No new thought or talent is coming up, the alarmed citizen fears.

* * *

NOT LASTING

That condition, however, cannot last.

The majority of Americans undoubtedly believe that President Roosevelt will go down into history as a great figure.

But there are men coming up, as surely as the sun comes up, perhaps men unknown now, who will be able to develop the socio-economic state far beyond the comprehension of present-day men.

There will be political leaders, young and fresh (who in turn will become weary) that will receive the acclaim of the tens of millions.

Life is not ending, except for the few. It always is beginning. Evolution moves us forward, relentlessly, whether we will or not.

Or, as Goethe put it: "Nature knows no pause in progress and development, and attaches her curse on all inaction."

Delay Proposed Uniform Marriage Law.

—By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON—Without public announcement, Senator Capper of Kansas evidently has given up hope of putting across his plan for uniform marriage and divorce laws this session.

The versatile Kansan, who knows more than one way of intriguing midwest sentiment, offered a constitutional amendment and a bill designed to abolish gin marriages, six-weeks divorces and child weddings in one swift blow.

Many things have arisen to claim his attention, so that now it seems unlikely even hearings will be held on his legislation. Capper's principal interest continues to be agriculture and he has worked long and painstakingly on the farm bill in committee, in the Senate and in conference.

Also he has become a commander of the troops battling for the vote for Washington's voteless 500,000 residents, and with all the local newspapers whooping it up for the campaign he is busy no end.

* * *

South Agin It.

BUT the thing which perhaps was most effective in scuttling Capper's marital legislation was the anti-lynching filibuster. Not only was much time consumed which might have been given over to such issues as the marriage bill, but the southern senators picked out the marriage bill for incidental potshots as they worried through the weeks. Senator Ellender pictured it as likely to weaken southern marriage laws so there would be a wholesale commingling of the white and negro races.

Senator Capper and the women's groups supporting his campaign never have contended it would be possible to enact uniform federal marriage and divorce laws without a constitutional amendment, but a bill has always been introduced right along with the amendment ever since the drive was inaugurated about 1923.

The bill contains many provisions which would irritate patrons of free and easy marriage and divorce. No longer would marrying New Yorkers be able to speed into Connecticut's Greenwich, for the bill provides a two-weeks waiting period after the license is issued. The license must be obtained in the county the woman lives in, the bill provides, but once the license is obtained a couple can be married in any county in the country. But they must decide on the county in advance so it can be written on the license.

* * *

Capper Still Hopeful.

PARENTS must give consent for boys of 18 or girls of 16 to marry, the bill provides, and none may marry younger. Exceptions are provided where babies are involved.

For violations there is a penalty upon the couple, the license clerk or the parson, ranging from $100 to $500. Moreover, the license must list the names of all previous mates of either party and how the marriage was ended.

As grounds for divorce, the bill sets up cruelty, abandonment, insanity, conviction of an infamous crime or adultery of one of the parties. If both are guilty of adultery, the marriage must go right on. No divorce trial may be held within two months of the filing of the suit, and a year must elapse before the parties may remarry.

The bill is designed to make divorces or marriages in one state legal in all others, regardless of what supplementar local laws there are, and that is part of what annoyed the southerners, most of whose states outlaw white-negro marriages, regardless of where they were performed.

Senator Capper expects that the activities of several women's clubs in support of the amendment and bill ultimately will get the legislation a hearing.

ALL of US

—By MARSHALL MASLIN

Peace Out of Torment.

SOONER or later, a man's life goes down into the darkness of bitterness and despair.

I do not care who that man is or what he is doing or how happily he seems to be placed in the affairs of this world, there are moments, hours, even days when all his endeavors seem futile and he loses that fine zest for living that makes for happiness.

At such a time he is ashamed of himself, but his shame is of little avail . . . he is far down in the black pit and without strength to rise. He has dark thoughts then and all his philosophy and the borrowed philosophy of other men seems weak and shabby and futile.

Friends have told me that this is true for them . . . and I have seen it confessed in their eyes. I know that this is true for me.

I know only one cable that is strong enough at such time to lift me out of the dark valleys into which I have wandered.

It helps me not at all, then, to count my blessings, my good fortune. I achieve nothing then by thinking of how many other human beings in the world who are so much worse off than I. That effort to lift myself to happiness by reflecting on the misery of others brings only shame to me and deepens by self-disgust.

But if I count my obligations, if I number my responsibilities, if I think of what I have promised silently to perform, if I think of children who are in my care—then, in some strange way the blackness lifts and little by little I come out into the light of a saner day.

This may not make sense, but I know that this is so. It seems absurd for a man to regain his strength by remembering the calls upon his endurance, that he should achieve happiness by recalling that others are dependent upon him.

But it is true. I know it is true, because it has happened to me. It cannot happen to the man who is alone, who has taken no obligations upon his shoulders. He must find other remedies for his sickness. . . . But the man who has taken to himself the proper tasks of normal men has immunized himself against black fear, self-pity and despair—and needs only to be reminded of his pledges.

DAILY BIBLE THOUGHT

FATHERS AND CHILDREN: What man is there of you, whom if his son ask bread, will he give him a stone? or if he ask a fish, will he give him a serpent? If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your Father which is in heaven give good things to them that ask him?—Matthew 7:9-11.

McIntyre's New York Glimpses

—By O. O. McINTYRE

PERHAPS the most illustrious ponent of the ideal bachelor life in New York is Howard Sturges, who is, as a matter of fact, an official resident of Providence, R. I. But he circulates chiefly in Manhattan and among what is called the International Set.

Tall, strikingly dour, he has devoted much of his time to deluxe entertaining, both here and abroad. And in a day when many economic royalists are down to their last pantryman, he continues to go right on whooping it up as though nothing had happened to the world.

This winter, for instance, he decided to give a ball for the first cabin crowd to honor his favorite niece in native Providence. He invited the pick of his Gotham friends, but the engraved invitations were merely the signal gun for his bombardment of hospitality.

He had a special train of coaches to transport them to and from the Rhode Island capital. And furthermore he put up his guests in individual suites with a hand picked corps of expertly trained servants to anticipate every want.

Eleanor Sears, famous woman walker, is seen around the city now and then swinging along with the same jaunty, graceful stride that distinguished her when she was budding into womanhood and surprising the athletic world with her accomplished adventures into the art ambulandi. The years have greyed the Boston headliner's hair, but otherwise she has changed little.

Louis Bromfield, the young Mansfield, O., novelist, touched off the Maharajah vogue that now seems to afflict so many seeking celebrity. Bromfield left his Paris home a couple of years ago and spent a hunting season with one of the Indian potentates and later brought His Nibs to Paree for swings around the mulberry bush. From these contacts Bromfield salvaged material for his recent widely sold book, "The Rains Came." Now comes word from the Far East that the ageless Lady Mendl, formerly Elsie De Wolfe, has departed with a pile of blond luggage for a visit to 8—count 'em 8—Maharajahs. She has as her companion the longnetted wife of Somerset Maugham.

Earle McHugh, a magazine advertising poobah, has a rather disconcerting contraption for visitors to his office. Right in the middle of his desk is an eight ball mounted on a gold standard. When one sits across the desk to talk to him there is no certainty which one is behind the ball. He believes it is better for both to start from scratch and then work out of the dilemma.

Adela Rogers St. John's attractive daughter Elaine has proved a proverbial chip off the old block. The other day she hawked her first story to Liberty. Her mother sold her first fiction twenty years ago to the Green book. Ray Long, as he did so many, encouraged her to give story telling a twirl. Incidentally, Adela, with all the fervor which has characterized her career, recently became interested in farming and took on an acreage in Jersey, where she now spends all time away from the typewriter, developing.

Irvin S. Cobb has begun the autobiography for which many have been waiting. It is called tentatively "Mostly About Myself," and magazine editors angled for it for 10 years. Cobb's career is especially interesting to the newspaper crowd because he insists he is now and always has been a reporter. His journalistic ventures encompass every phase of newspaperdom—from "the" reporter on a Paducah daily to an ace correspondent during the World war. His most notable achievement, perhaps, was covering the Thaw trial entirely with pencil, the copy being rushed to the Evening World by a fleet of office boys. He has been an intimate of almost every great figure of the past two decades. And as Bob Davis once said of him: "His hat fits him still."

Musing: I do not think anything makes a fellow feel such a useless member of society as to try out skating after a lapse of years. Venturing forth timidly in rabbity strokes while virile young bloods swoop by in long graceful glides.

Timely Editorial

Federal Theater Propaganda.

Three United States senators are shown as obstructing the public welfare in the current edition of the "Living Newspaper," a WPA theater project in New York City. The senators in question are Millard Tydings of Maryland, Harry F. Byrd of Virginia and Charles O. Andrews of Florida. They are being deliberately held up to scorn in a scene laid in the senate, when the administration's slum clearance program was under debate, because they were independent enough in their political thinking to criticize certain aspects of that program.

Think of it! The federal theater is financed by federal funds. These funds are here being used to spread propaganda against the elected representatives of the American people and, by implication, to intimidate them. In effect, congressmen are being told, "So much as speak against a new deal measure on the floor of either house of Congress and you may be held up to New York audiences as an enemy of the people in a production backed by the taxpayers' money."—Kansas City Times.

LOST LADY + + +

By GEORGE E. HOLT

(Copyright 1938)

CHAPTER I

Sunset in a little California valley lost among the high hills.

A tiny valley, green where a little brook, fed by a spring, wandered through it. Hemmed in on three sides by barren hillsides; open on the west to the setting sun, a crimson ball, like a Chinese lantern, which touched everything in the valley with gold.

Gold!

Once a river had filled this valley. It had cut through the hills, worn away their sides, leaving, in places, small precipices.

Against one of these faces the sun revealed a dark square—the mouth of a tunnel. So some one sought gold of another sort.

Suddenly a man appeared at the tunnel mouth, a dark, gold-tinted figure. He paused a moment to look back into the dark opening. Then ran swiftly to one side. Waited. Glanced at the reddening sunset sky.

"The last shot for today," he muttered, and wiped his sweating face with a blue bandanna handkerchief tied around his neck. "That bacon and coffee sure smell good," he added, and looked toward where a small rough cabin stood, with smoke rising from its drunken chimney.

"Boom-m-mm!"

The tunnel roared and belched smoke and rock-dust.

"There she blows!" commented the man. "Time for a smoke." He knew that it would be some minutes before he should enter the tunnel; dynamite fumes are not good breathing. He lighted his pipe. A man came to the cabin door, and called. "Come an' get it!"

Shortly he re-entered the tunnel. It had grown darker now, so he used a little flashlight. In a moment he returned, staring at something in his hand. Then:

"Hey! Tom! He-e-e-y, Tom!"

There was a hoarseness in his voice, an excitement, which made it quaver, fail to carry. He tried again.

"He-e-ey, Tom-m-m! Where the hell are you?"

Then he threw his pipe away and started in a shambling run over the rocky path toward the cabin. Stumbling because he was either looking at the piece of quartz in his hand, or looking toward the cabin, or shouting, "Hey, Tom!"

But now Tom appeared in the doorway. An elderly man like his partner. A man who had once been a huge frame, and still had the big bones, but who was now carrying no ounce of fat. A man with a scraggly gray beard and mustache, and whose bald head reflected the last lingering rays of the California sunset. Pinkly.

"Something bite you?" he shouted

But the other man was now too out of breath to shout back. He continued to the cabin door, thrust the piece of ore into his partner's hand, and managed to gasp:

"I'll say. Old Lady Luck—has bit us—both."

The man called Tom stared at the rock, and his lips puckered into a whistle that never was born. Then he looked into the eyes of the other man.

"Well," he said, and his voice was reverent. "I will certainly be damned!"

"You and me both," echoed his companion.

'Is there—is there much of it, Charlie?" asked Tom.

In reply Charlie grabbed him by the arm, tugged at him.

"Come an' look, Tom! Oh, great side winders, just come an' look! We weren't six inches away from it. That last charge. Oh, hell! Come an' look!"

They went and looked. Tom Castle and Charlie Kilbourne. Went into the dark tunnel in which dynamite odor still lingered. Lighted it with their flashlight, and stared at the pile of quartz blown up by the explosive. White quartz turned almost golden by the wealth of its content.

Gold-free gold, as it is called, to distinguish it from gold which is mixed with other metals or which is found in chemical combination with other elements—hurries the breath of any man, even though he may have seen it a hundred times.

No prospector who has struck it rich a dozen times, no mining engineer who has located a dozen paying properties, none can look upon the yellow metal in the quartz of a new strike without a feeling of wonder.

Because of its rarity? Because of its beauty? Because of its surprisingness? Because of what it will buy?

All these, perhaps—because the doubly rich man, who has everything the world can give him, is moved as much by something in the yellowed quartz as is the poor desert rat who now sees a life of independence and luxury ahead of him.

Neither Charlie Kilbourne nor Tom Castle had any need of gold. They sought it for the fun of seeking—and for that glorious exhilaration which, they knew, came when it was found.

Thus the true prospector, and the true desert rat, may find pay dirt; but, it having been found, their feet must lead them away from there, to make another strike—leaving that which they have just found to be developed by folks whose feet don't itch and who do not dream of new locations as a mother dreams of her first-born-to-be. "Something lost behind the ranges." Always that.

"Luvva Pete!" Tom Castle's voice was religious. "Great jumpin' catfish! Why, Charlie, me lad, that stuff'll run five thousand a ton or better, or I'll eat it." His big hand swooped down between Kilbourne's shoulder-blades, making him cough.

"I betcha," Kilbourne agreed, when he could speak. "And will ye look?" When excited Kilbourne was apt to reflect the Irish idiom of his ancestors. "Will ye look at the width of the ledge, me boy! Will ye look!"

"Charlie," said Tom Castle. "Charlie, my boy, I have a pint of fifteen-year-old in my dunnage-bag, where it's been overlong, awaitin' this holy and felicitous moment. What would you say was the right and proper thing to do?"

"And we'll just take along this fine large chunk of Lady Luck to join in the party. Lead on, Mac Castle. . . ."

And presently, while the stars were popping out, came sounds of revelry from the cabin. The thumping of a guitar, and old voices singing . . . song of long ago.

* * *

The friendship-partnership between Charlie Kilbourne and Tom Castle might have appeared inexplicable to one not acquainted with them—and there were even those who knew Kilbourne as the wealthy owner of Rancho Santa Maria in San Diego county who wondered why he spent his time wandering over the face of California with Tom Castle and a couple of burros and a packload of canned food, seeking gold he didn't need.

But the answer was simple.

These two old cronies had been pals in Cuba, when the world was shouting "Cuba Libre" and life was young and more or less full of hell. They rode with Roosevelt, and when the riding was done, returned to California where Kilbourne's father owned the Rancho Santa Maria.

They tried it for a year, but ranch life was too tame after fighting Spaniards and seeing the world. Thus they decided to vary it with a year in the wilderness, on the trail of gold. Then Tom's father had died, back east, and Tom had gone back. And Charlie Kilbourne had taken the business of the rancho off the hands of an invalid father, and eventually married and welcomed a son to succeed him.

The years had passed. A dozen. And then one day Tom Castle, older and tired, had come to Rancho Santa Maria. And to a welcome such as few men could or would give to an old companion in arms.

He gave no account of the years between, nor were questions ever asked.

But he found that his friend was fed up with ranch life and felt free to do something else.

"Well, then," Castle had said. "Let's pack a couple of burros and go see if we can find the gold we didn't find before." More as a joke than in earnest.

But Charlie Kilbourne had taken him up on it.

That had been a long time ago, and they still were at it, still loved the life among the mountains, the long trails and the wood smoke at evening and the smell of frying bacon and boiling coffee.

Rancho Santa Maria had a foreman, and could take care of itself. So Charlie Kilbourne was happy.

As for Tom Castle . . . he had no ranch, but he was happy just the same.

Or was he?

Sometimes Charlie Kilbourne wondered

Sometimes Charlie Kilbourne wondered what took Tom Castle back east, or somewhere, once each year. For a month, maybe—sometimes not so long.

But Tom never said, and Charlie never asked.

* * *

Scarcely had the morning sun penetrated through the night mist of the little valley when there were sounds of stirrings in the rough cabin. Sudden smoke rose from the stovepipe thrusting its drunken length from the roof; Tom Castle, in shirt and pants, opened the door and came out to dip water from a bucket into a coffeepot, and the voice of Charlie Kilbourne shouted, "Well, for the lovva Mike, ain't that coffee ready yet?"

"G'wan back to sleep, you millionaire!" retorted Tom. "Just my luck—have to get up and make coffee the first morning I get rich. Have to wait on a blasted plutocrat. But don't you forget, millions, or no millions, it's up to you to wash the breakfast dishes with your own fair hands."

He returned to the shanty, and there were indications of a handled frying-pan, and of batter being beaten in a bowl. Accompanied by much banter, for these two roustabouts were still kids, and every minute of life was fun.

"I reckon, Mr. Rockefeller," said Tom, over the breakfast table, "that you'll be gettin' yourself a new shirt. That one looks sorta shabby."

"Pants," replied Kilbourne. "Pants. That's what I need, more'n I do a shirt. I'll buy me a pant. I'll buy two pants, begorry."

"Fine," said Charlie. "Then I'll have an extra pair."

Kidding each other, they made their way to the mine. But just as they reached the tunnel mouth there came a faint halloo, and they turned to see a rider emerging through the little pass into the valley. As they looked the rider swung his sombrero and let out the rebel yell.

"It's Murray!" shouted Kilbourne. "By gollies, it's Murray! Hi-i-i, sou!"

"Well, if it ain't your young hopeful!" exclaimed Tom, and gave a screech like a lost bagpipe. "He-e-ey, kid! He-e-ey, Don Murray!" using the Spanish title affectionately applied to Murray Blake Kilbourne at Rancho Santa Maria, and elsewhere, when the boy had gone into short pants. Now that he had reached man's estate, the title still stuck—but now a title of respect as well as affection—not only among the people of the ranchos, but through Northern Mexico as well.

Don Murray applied spurs, came galloping over the trail, sitting his horse like the cowboys by whom he had been taught to ride. He reined to a halt in a slither of stones and dust, his horse on its haunches. Swung to the ground and stamped forward, a hand outstretched to each of his elders.

"Hi, Dad," he said, and his clear gray eyes searched the weather-beaten face of his father. "You're lookin' fine. Every day in every way you get younger and younger."

He turned to Castle, hand gripping hand.

* * *

Murray resembled his long-shanked, lanky father especially in one feature—the eyes were the clear gray eyes of each other. But his mouth was more generous, and his nose was likewise more generous, and the shape of his face, like the tan which covered it and the red blood which showed through the tan, had something Spanish about it—here showed the blood of his mother, who had been Senorita Ursula Palos before she became Mrs. Charlie Kilbourne. A small black moustache—a small defiance to the convention of smooth-shavery—added to his Spanish appearance, and coal black hair, curly and close to his head, gave the finishing touch. No one by looking at him could have honestly denied that he appeared to be of Spanish blood. But the Irish of Ulster showed through his eyes merrily, defying the sombre blood of Spain—and if there is a more intriguing, a more unpredictable, a more illogical blood than that mixture of Ulster and Spain, the fact is not known to the wise men who explain howcome we are what we are and not something which we are not. But the wise women of South Ireland and the wise women of the Spanish gypsies, could have learned, in one look, what the American psychologist guesses at in the course of a large and heavily documented book.

"Gans goo," said Murray's father, grinning like an ape and forgetting to let go of his son's hand. "Gans like a million dollars, boy. Yay, fine as frawg's hair. Ya lo creo!"

"You act like you'd struck another mother-lode," said Murray.

"We have, we sure have, we have," chanted Tom Castle, loading his ancient deadly pipe. "Who were Comstock and Fair and Mackay but a bunch of wouldbes? Come and lookit, Kid—come and lookit!"

Between them they dragged him off to the tunnel, chattering like magpies who had taken a course in oratory. Bragging with all the childish fun of bragging, knowing it as such. But when Don Murray, mining engineer, took a second look at the vein which had been uncovered, and had stared popeyed at a sample of the ore lying about, he whistled a few bars from "Cucaracha" and then offered a serious hand of congratulation to each of his companions.

"As a mining engineer," he said, "permit me to ask if you need a good cowhand on your ranch, dad—or maybe somebody to haul this ore out to the dump. I have resigned. Here I've hunted gold all over hellandgone, scientifically, oh, very, very scientifically! . . . and you two woodchucks go out with a couple of jassacks and a can of beans and find where it all comes from. You may have my diploma . . . you may give it to one of your burros—or both of 'em. Hereafter I am just Murray Kilbourne, A. B., cowhand, junior grade."

"Yeah," jibed Castle, "Y' look just like a cowhand. Fancy riding pants and a shirt and necktie and everything. Oh, yeah, You'd look fine chasing a cow!"

"Well, hell, hombre! I probably couldn't catch her anyhow," retorted Murray. "Not if I started out to do it. I'd probably catch a gopher . . . And sometimes I have dared to think of Cecil Rhodes and John Hayes Hammond . . . Gimme some breakfast."

They adjourned to the cabin, and while youth was being fed, talked of things which interested them. One of which, of course, was as to where Murray had been during the months since they had seen him.

"Oh, hither and yonder, and back again," Murray told them. 'Down Chihuahua way for a few weeks, then back through Baja California. Spent yesterday at the ranch, Dad. Everything is perfect shape. Better," he added, deliberately, chewing a pancake, "much better, I think, than if you stuck around the place."

"Yeh," retorted his father, "with both of us gone, I reckon the ranch'll get along all right. See any of the neighbors?"

"Of course, Dad. Couldn't go to Santa Maria without calling on the O'Haras."

"And how are Shane and Rose, and Rancho Soledad, son?"

"Fine as silk. If I ever saw two people who are in love with each other, those two are Shane O'Hara and the Rose of Soledad. Shane's got luck. Wish I could find me a girl who. . . . And the ranch is doing fine, too. Shane combined his Rancho Paloma with the Rancho Soledad, and Jose Verdugo—you remember, Uncle Tom, Jose, Black Sam's England. Proud? Quite some."

"Shane O'Hara," commented Kilbourne, "sure dropped into Lady Luck's lap when he fell outta that airplane, a year ago. Catches him a beautiful girl, who is not only beautiful but a damn nice woman besides, and two ranchos — and what I mean, ranchos, not back yards—and pretty soon I becha he'll be catchin' himself an heir."

"I'm takin' no bets on that, Dad. And Shane is twice as happy as Hitler, . . . Just missed meeting Chris Drake—Shane said he was up there last week."

"The deputy sheriff, eh? He's sure been making' a name for himself since he got on this job. Wonder what he was doin' there?"

"Oh, Shane said he'd just come up to say hello—he had some business up that way so dropped in to see them. Sorry I missed him. Shane was telling me some of the things he's done. Sounds like a man that would stand some knowing."

"Yeh," Charlie Kilbourne grunted. "Chris is all right—cleverest man in the sheriff's office. . . . There's apt to be trouble somewhere near if he's around on business."

"Well, if there is, maybe I'll get a chance to meet him this time."

* * *

There were three kids now, instead of two—a pair of old fellows enjoying life to the uttermost; a young fellow going right along with them. Fun interspread with serious intervals when the development of the mine was considered. And then Murray Kilbourne proudly exhibited a new pistol he had acquired.

Tom Castle bragged. "I bet your old man is the best shot in California. By grab! Yesterday he plugged a running jack rabbit—and what I mean, running—as far as from here to Los Angeles. With a six-gun."

"A jack!" gibed Murray. "Gosh, a jack is as big as a donkey. That wouldn't be any kind of shot. Couldn't miss."

"Hear it!" retorted Castle. "Maybe a jack is pretty big when he's standin' still, but a running jack ain't nothing but the shortest distance between two points. A line, what I mean. A line with nothin' but length."

"Oh, well," said Murray. "I admit it's not such poor shooting—for an old feller. Eyes aren't so good. Hand ain't steady. Nerves—"

"The heck they ain't! The heck it isn't! Nerves—" exclaimed Kilbourne, senior. "I'll betch—I'll betch half my interest in the mine, Murray, me lad, that I can outshoot you with anything from a bean-shooter to a Big Bertha. Bring on your rats."

"Okey, pop," assented Don Murray irreverently. "I'll put up a half interest in the mine in Mexico that I'm going to find some day—if I find it. What you shootin' with?"

"Thirty-eight on a 45 frame," his father told him. "My old sweetheart. Little Annie Rooney. I'll cat'chum."

He went to the cabin, returned with the gun to where the other two were sitting on the ground beneath a tree.

"We'll take that white rock at the mouth of the tunnel for a tar—"

He twisted sideways suddenly, his ankle turned by a small round stone which slid beneath his foot . . . tried to regain his balance . . . fell . . . and the gun in his hand spit and crashed. His hand released it. He rolled over, sat up. "Well—" he began. "Well—I—"

Murray was on his feet. Staring first at his father, then at Tom Castle who had sunk back against the tree, his hand to his side. Tom groaned a little.

"Father! Dad! Uncle Tom! He's—he's shot."

Charlie Kilbourne came stumbling toward them. "Tom—Tom Castle!" He threw himself to his knees beside Tom and Murray. There was a spreading stain on Tom Castle's shirt now, where his hand pressed it. "Tom—tell me—you're not hurt bad. To think that I—"

PARENTS WIN

Court Gives Them Custody of Baby Held as 'Security.'

CARLISLE, Pa.—(AP)—Parents of an eight-months-old baby boy won custody of their son from neighbors who held the infant as "security" for a $16 board bill.

County Judge Fred S. Reese awarded the child to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred McCalister of Newville, on a writ of habeas corpus, taking the baby from Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Miller.

The Millers protested that the McCalisters entrusted the child to their care for two months while Mrs. McCalister was in a hospital—and that a board bill of $2 a week was unpaid.

Judge Reese said:

"You cannot assert a lien on flesh and blood, like you can on an automobile."

'MONSTER' DEAD, MOBILE QUIETER

Fireman Charges Admission for Glimpse of Hunt Trophy.

MOBILE, Ala.—(U.P.)—All was quiet today in Fisher's Alley, the Harlem of Mobile. The terrible "monster of Marmotte street" was dead.

A shotgun blast killed the "monster" as it went for the throat of a collie dog. Residents had been trying to corner it for weeks.

Charles Ardoyno, a fireman, who brought the "monster" down, capitalized on his aim by charging admission—10 cents for children, 25 cents for adults—to view the corpse.

The "monster" was a 45-pound otter.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—
Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go
The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.
A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. 25c. Stubbornly refuse anything else.

Hits U. S. 'Secrecy' on Data of Plane-Warship Tests

TEXAN HOLDS CRITICISM OF ARMS FEARED

Maverick Says Investment In More Bombers Would Make Nation Invulnerable.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—The administration was charged today with suppressing reports of tests showing surface warships vulnerability to airplane attack in an effort to protect the new battleship construction program against adverse criticism.

Rep. Maury Maverick, D., Tex., a new dealer who bolted President Roosevelt on national defense spending, made the charges. They were submitted by the United Press to the war and navy department and were denied in general terms by high ranking officers.

Maverick, a member of the house military affairs committee, said he had been told he could examine the test reports if he would keep the information confidential.

"The existence of reports on the vulnerability of an attacking fleet to airplane defense is not denied," Maverick said in an interview. "I have been told I could see the reports if I would keep them secret and that the war department has orders to keep them confidential.

Names Roosevelt.

"Obviously the secret is one that is being kept from the American people. President Roosevelt wants a big fleet of whopping battleships and anything that casts doubt on their usefulness is not for the public to know."

Maverick said air units demonstrated in Pacific maneuvers their ability to locate an approaching fleet and that it had been demonstrated that direct hits are not necessary to sink a man-of-war.

A 2,000-pound bomb dropped alongside, he explained, would disable a big cruiser by force of concussion. After vessels of the fleet were located in Pacific maneuvers, Maverick said the airmen "plastered them with sandbag bombs."

"The same amount of money sought for big battleships, invested in pursuit planes and gombers," Maverick continued. "Would make the United States invulnerable. If that is not true let it be proved untrue. Why keep the public in the dark, or, if we are to be saddled with a huge navy of supersuper ships, let it not be at the expense of neglecting our aerial defenses.

"Lost Lady" was written by George E. Holt, author of "The Rose of Soledad" which also ran in the News-Journal some time ago. Like that romantic yarn, it is laid in the west and southwest, much of the action taking place in Tijuana, Mexico.

A young prospector is charged by Tom Castle, an old timer in the mining district, to start a search for a long lost daughter, and the search turns to Tijuana, gayest city of the southwest.

With only a picture of the girl's mother to guide him in his search for a girl he has never seen, Murray Kilbourne starts out after old Tom Castle's death, but even after he is certain that he has found her, his task is complicated by the fact that she doesn't want to be found.

One of Murray's first acts in Tijuana is to slap the town's bad man and thereby make an implacable enemy. The bad man's determination to secure Castle's money through marriage to his daughter leads to exciting complications.

Up and Down THE STREET

"In the spring of the year, a young man's fancy . . ." and etc., but along the latter part of the winter, when there is a hint of warmer days in the atmosphere, thoughts pretty often turn to steak roasts and picnics. At least it seemed so last night when the Freshman Hi-Y club got together and at least a half dozen suggested a picnic in the near future. But with the official opening of spring still 26 days away, the boys were prevailed upon to wait awhile. But there will be an outing the very first day spring comes over the hills, regardless of the calendar.

It's just like "old home week" when you visit Florida these days, Mr. and Mrs. Walter L. Beckley, South Diamond street, contend. The Beckleys, who have just returned from a trip down the east coast and up the west coast of Florida, ran into people from Mansfield and Galion at every turn. They stopped in Fort Lauderdale one noon for luncheon and on the way out met Mr. and Mrs. James Lucas and Mr. and Mrs. George DeYarmon. The party has winter quarters in Palm Beach. While talking to them, they looked across the street and sighted Roy Antibus, another Mansfielder. Beckley, one of the more ardent fishermen, reports the fishing, especially the deep sea sport, is not so good right now.

Signs of spring have been coming thick and fast, most of them involving the "first" robin, but Donald Miller of Steam Corners has a new one which he contends never fails. Buzzards know when the cold weather is over, he says, and he saw one of the big black birds yesterday near his home. The robin sign doesn't mean much, according to Miller, who reported seeing several of them since Jan. 20.

TOWN MENACED

Residents Prepare To Flee as Arkansas Levee Breaks.

FULTON, Ark.—(AP)—Raging waters of the Red river today threatened to force evacuation of this little southwest Arkansas town.

A few townspeople departed last night but most remained, hopeful that the giant protecting levee again would perform the task for which it was built more than 30 years ago.

The stream, at an all-time high of 35.7 feet, was several feet higher than the town itself, snuggling behind the dike, and lapped within a few inches of the top of the levee. The previous high stage, in 1927, was 35.6.

Chicago Police Question Pair In Murder of German Exile, World War Hero.

(By United Press)

CHICAGO—Two men, suspected of having committed a series of robberies, were questioned today about the slaying of Dr. Max Bernhard Sammett, 44, war hero and political exile from Germany.

Terence Monahan, 23, and Ray Miller, 35, were arrested last night while attempting to hold up George Pilat, 31. They accosted Pilat as he entered his automobile and forced him to drive them about the city. He shouted for help when halted at a stoplight and attracted two policemen who made the arrest. The attempted robbery occurred only a few blocks from the abandoned residence where Sammett's body was found Sunday.

The development weakened an earlier theory that the murder may have resulted from a political motive, but police continued to study a half ton of records found in Sammet's room for evidence of anti-Nazi affiliations. He had told friends he left Germany because of an anti-Semitic campaign there.

Monahan and Miller carried .32 caliber pistols, similar to the one with which Sammett was killed. The guns were to be tested by ballistics experts.

Previous victims of robberies, police believe were committed by the suspects, said they were driven around in automobiles, taken to abandoned buildings and tied up.

Police theorized that Sammett also may have been a robbery victim and was killed when he resisted.

BACK AFTER 30 YEARS, TED LEWIS RECALLS HIS FIRST VISIT TO CITY

Ted Lewis, the only person in the world to wear the same hat longer than Queen Mary, leaned against the wall backstage at the Madison theater last night recalling the other time he played to a Mansfield audience.

That was before the days of the battered topper, and long before he was asking "Is Everybody Happy?" He was a kid from Circleville, O., who could play fairly well on the clarinet, and was still known by his own moniker of Theodore Friedman.

"I was 16 years old when I came to Mansfield, so it must have been along in 1907," he recalled. "You had a little, dinky theater here called the Orpheum, with a funny shaped stage about the size of a hall in a five room bungalow. But man! that stage looked like Broadway to me in those days. I wish I could feel that important again—just once. I hadn't even finished high school but even then I was pretty well set on a stage career—the family to the contrary. And I was confident that I had everything for success—because I'd been assistant to the leader of the Circleville Boys' band, and had played several instruments in a music store down home."

* * *

That was the beginning of a career that has become a tradition of the American theater. Lewis is the "last minstrel," and back of him is a career that has endeared him to theatergoers throughout the nation, so that when his name goes up in lights over a marquee, whether it is in New York City or London or Walla Walla, there is a packed house.

That old silk hat of Lewis' is as much a part of him as his expressive, waving hands, and the legend of that topper isn't hokum built up for publicity purposes. It is the symbol of his success. Because of it and the impression of melancholy that comes from his soft, slow tones, he has gained the soubriquet of the "high hatted tragedian of jazz."

* * *

The hat was once the property of a cabbie whose stand was in front of Rector's in New York City, and sometimes when Lewis and the three other members of his band (then playing their first big time engagement at Rectors) rode with the cabbie, Lewis would take the colored man's high silk hat and wear it, twirling his cane and doffing the hat in mock grandeur.

One night he got into a game of dice with the cabbie, and won the hat. He wore it in his act that night and has never appeared without it since. That was in 1917, and in the 20 years since, Lewis has spent more than $200 to keep the topper in repairs. On close inspection it is old and wrinkled and faded—but it is a symbol of an era in the American theater that still lives only because Ted Lewis is still a trouper.

And Lewis is a trouper of the old school. Last night he was feeling miserable because of a cold—but the audience out front never knew it.

The Lewis step was as light, his banter as gay and his songs as carefree and tuneful as if he had been in the pink. His shows, like himself, are of a type rapidly passing. There isn't an obscene joke nor a line of profanity in any act, not even a mild "damn." So far as he is concerned he still plays to the same type of audiences as he did before obscenity had a commercial value. He still holds fast to his belief that good showmanship, talent, beauty and personality is what the American public wants.

* * *

Perhaps he's right. The minstrel who learned to lead a band on Main street of Circleville, seldom plays to poor houses. Yesterday he gave four performances in Mansfield to capacity audiences. Only once during the day could everyone in the theater be seated, and there were times when it was impossible to get through the packed lobby.

He moved on today to another one night engagement. In a few weeks he goes back to New York.

"Retire?" he repeated to a question. "Yes—when I die. It took me 30 years to repeat my Mansfield engagement—the chances are I'll be coming back again in the next 30 years!"

HOOSIERS STAGE BIG SHOW FOR 'FAVORITE SON'

Philippines Commissioner In Capital; Only Bands and Posters Are Missing.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Paul V. McNutt, high commissioner to the Philippines, said today of reports that he aspires to the 1940 Democratic presidential nomination "I am not a candidate for any public office."

WASHINGTON—Nineteen forty's first full-blown presidential candidacy breezed into Washington today in the person of tall, tanned, handsome Paul V. McNutt, U. S. high commissioner to the Philippines, and one-time governor of Indiana.

The weather was rainy, but that did not prevent half a hundred newspaper photographers and reporters accompanying a like number of loyal Hoosier Democrats from forming a large reception committee to welcome the commissioner at the station. Several hundred leaders of Indiana democracy, who came here on a special train, constituted a larger reception committee at a hotel where McNutt "headquarters" were established in regular political convention style.

Fill Up Hotels.

The national capital which is used to various kinds of conventions and demonstrations, never saw anything quite like the show which the Hoosiers are putting on for the favorite son—two years in advance of the national nominating convention. They have taken 30-odd suites in one of the capital's most fashionable hotels, they have a press room for the accomodation of photographers and reporters and other appurtenances of a national convention.

Late this afternoon, from 4 until 7, there will be a gigantic reception for the candidate at the hotel. Some four thousand invitations have been sent out by Senator Sherman Minton, Indiana's junior senator. It promises to be quite a party.

Officially, the Philippine commissioner came to Washington to report to President Roosevelt on conditions in the far east, but the official character of his mission was almost completely lost in the political hurrah that accompanied him.

All of congress and all of the more prominent officials of the New Deal have been invited to the reception this afternoon. But not all of them are going

OPENS HEARING

Court Starts Muskingum Suit At Mt. Vernon Today.

MT. VERNON—(UP)—A three-judge court of appeals convened here today to hear arguments on the Muskingum conservancy district's appeal from an injunction against its issuance of $1,500,000 in 10-year general property tax bonds.

Directors of the conservancy district proposed to float the issue to finance land acquisitions in the 17-county district and construction of dams and other flood control devices.

Although the injunction has prevented issuance of $1,500,000 in bonds, an entire issue of $3,000,000 is directly involved.

The suit brought by Charles Hostetter, Canton, as a taxpayer, contests validity of the district directors' action in clarifying assessments against individual property owners

The Great Game of Politics

—By FRANK R. KENT

End of the Filibuster.

WITH THE sidetracking of the so-called anti-lynching bill, which, to the exclusion of all other business, has absorbed the attention of the senate since Jan. 3, ended—temporarily, at least—as extraordinary a piece of politics as the country has seen in many years.

Without in the least reflecting upon the sincerity of Senator Robert Wagner, whose name is attached to the bill, the fact remains that its White House support was given to enable the national Democratic organization to pay its debt to the colored voters in eleven northern and border-line states who helped them win the presidential election of 1936. No denial of that statement has been made. None could be. The facts are much too obvious.

AS A result of the Roosevelt policy of aid and jobs for the unemployed, of which colored voters in the northern cities have been the chief beneficiaries, coupled with an expensive, intensive and carefully calculated coding campaign in which Federal patronage and White House cultivation were used to an unprecedented extent, the great bulk of the big colored vote in these pivotal states was transferred from the Republican party, where it had been a basic asset, to the New Deal party, which it enabled to carry a considerable number of states, including Pennsylvania, Indiana, Ohio, Illinois and others. Without that transfer of the colored voters, each one of which counted two, there would have been no such "mandate" from the people as the New Dealers proclaimed and Maine and Vermont, instead of being an isolated pair of states, would have been just two in a most sizable group.

NO ONE really disputes that either. So clear was the administration's obligation that when last year the anti-lynching bill, which, in one form or another, has been introduced at every session of congress for a generation, was reintroduced with applied pressure from colored leaders all over the country, the administration, by which is meant Mr. Roosevelt, and the national party organization, by which is meant Mr. Farley, had to "come through," and they did. This bill, as Mark Sullivan wrote, was born in the conditions and spirit of many years ago, and was directed against what has come to be the rarest crime in the United States. Yet, though Mr. Roosevelt, carefully avoided any public advocacy of the bill, he used his full weight in its behalf.

HIS LEADER, Senator Barkley, of Kentucky, who no one believed wanted the bill, was compelled to fight like a tiger for it. At least he seemed to While the filibuster was at its height and feeling high, Walter White, the colored lobbyist in charge of the bill, conferred with the president at the White House. The chief political force back of the bill in the senate was Senator Guffey, of Pennsylvania, who more successfully than any other Democrat has capitalized the colored vote in his state and who certainly would not have been elected in 1934 if it had not been for that vote, which amounts to considerably more than 300,000.

IT WAS HE who induced Mr. Roosevelt in 1934 to appoint a colored man as Special Attorney General, without the consent of the senate, and followed that up with a perfect deluge of federal favors for the colored race such as they never received from Republicans in their palmiest days. Upon the foundation laid by Mr. Guffey, Mr. Farley skillfully built, until the climax was reached in the 1936 campaign with a great division of the National Committee, and literally hundreds of teachers, preachers and professors, on regular salaries, traveling about the country with expenses paid, spreading the Roosevelt gospel. It was estimated that in the neighborhood of two million colored votes for Mr. Roosevelt, which had previously been Republican, were garnered. Naturally, the administration desire is to keep them and when the colored leaders made a point of the anti-lynching bill, administration leaders swung in behind it.

IT WAS determinedly opposed by southern senators, for three reasons—first, because it was a clearly uncalled-for proposition, which would not diminish the crime at which it aimed; second, because it struck at the very roots of the State Rights doctrine, supposedly dear to the Democratic party and particularly dear to the south; third, because they knew that the passage of this bill inevitably would be followed by an effort to break down, through federal legislation the primary election laws in the southern states by which the colored vote is practically nullified.

THIS WAS ONE of those bills, like the court-packing bill the recently enacted crop-control bill, which would not have gotten ten votes in the senate on a secret ballot. Yet, if there had been an open roll call it would have gotten at least 60. It was the sort of bill that made hypocrites and cowards of a good many senators, and if there had been any real conviction behind it the filibuster would have failed. The test of sincerity came on the cloture votes, where the advocates of the bill could never muster a majority, much less the required two-thirds. Now the fight is over, the administration politicians profess satisfaction. Some of them say it is an ideal result. They point out that they have satisfied the colored leaders that they did all they could and yet have avoided the extreme resentment toward the administration which would have resulted had the bill been jammed down the throats of the southern senators. The latter, of course, rejoice, but the fight has increased southern hostility toward the Roosevelt regime and lessened the likelihood of Roosevelt-controlled states in the 1940 convention.

Hollywood Speaks—

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—"The Adventures of Tom Sawyer" should be sub-titled "A Star Is Born." No prophetic power is needed to forecast that Tommy Kelly, the Bronx schoolboy introduced to the screen in the title role, will be taken to the collective fan heart.

The new version of the American classic calls for no guesswork, either. It stands to make, and deservedly, a heap of money. The picture, directed in color by Norman Taurog, calls to new life the familiar characters and situations, and evokes a hearty and pleasant glow. Comedy, pathos and hair-raising adventure are blended, as in the original Mark Twain, to make a sure appeal to all ages.

* * *

Tommy Kelly's Tom may not be exactly the Tom Sawyer you've pictured, but he's a Sawyer to applaud none the less. The boy's Irish face is so mobile and expressive that, likely due to Taurog's known facility with child actors, he seems to perform without trying.

Ann Gillis's Becky Thatcher is fine trouping, and May Robson does all you could ask with Aunt Polly. Victor Jory makes the dyed-in-the-wool villain, Injun Joe, almost credible and contributes notably to the terror of the cave scenes, here dramatized to the utmost for the climax. The bit-player who stands out is Olin Howland (the schoolmaster), whose dancing arm is a parlor trick in itself.

Walter Brennan, Jackie Moran as Huck Finn, and David Holt as Sid Sawyer (rather on the caricature side) are other principals.

* * *

"The Baroness And The Butler" has a novel idea: A prime minister (Henry Stephenson) has a perfect butler (William Powell) who gets himself elected to parliament and continues in his master's service while opposing him openly in the government.

The prime minister's daughter (Annabella) injects the romantic problem, apparent from the start: How to bring the baroness and the butler to a clinch, class distinctions being what they are—or were.

Powell's performance, as usual, is polished and exact, and his beauteous co-star's scarcely less engaging. Stephenson, Helen Westly and Joseph Schildkraut in the other principal roles all are admirable. Studio-heralded as "gay, sophisticated, subtle romance," the picture is never raucous entertainment but should please the unhurried.
